Dedication

The centennial edition of Taps, the annual publication of Clemson University, is dedicated to all members of Taps staff—past, present, and future. For a century now, Taps has attempted to put into print the meaning and the ephemeral experience of a few short years spent at the finest school in South Carolina.

The technology may have changed drastically, but the ritual of scrambling to produce photographs and copy remains constant. Many staffers have faced the conundrum of having to study for exams while meeting deadlines, but they always graduate and get a book out anyway. The successes have overwhelmed the few failures, and hopefully Taps' unending contributions to our beloved school's historical record will continue even a century from now.

Student Life

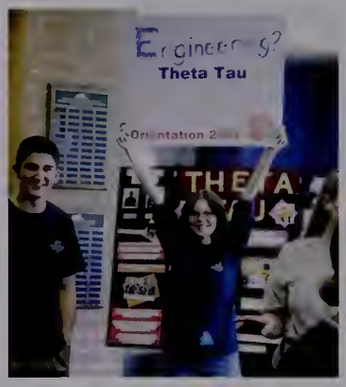
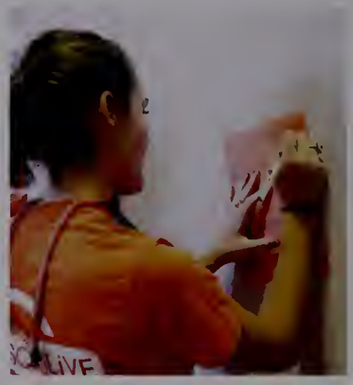
"The best part of orientation was breaking into small groups to meet your new classmates."
-Mary Moravec, freshman



Many student organizations, including professional fraternities and sororities, sent representatives to orientation sessions to create interest before students even moved onto campus.



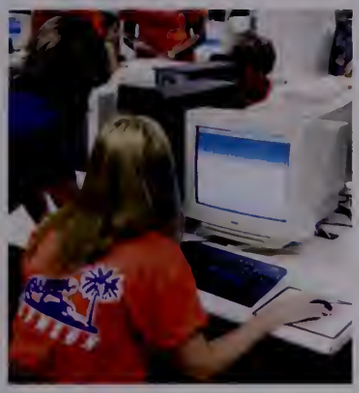
When meeting with their advisors, students have to read and understand lots of forms that explain the suggested curriculum requirements and the prerequisites.

During orientation, students receive a lot of information and handouts, but they also have time for fun with social events planned in the evenings.

Orientation

Jonathan Jordan

"Orientation was good because I was able to actually meet my advisor before registering for classes."
-Sadie Cooke, freshman



The Orientation Ambassadors are there to answer any questions students may have, including logistical questions about class registration, such as "Is it possible to get from P&A to Tillman during class change?"

With many student organization representatives available to answer any questions or concerns, orientation is a great opportunity for parents and students to talk to someone who is "in the know."

Registering for classes is one of the biggest activities at Orientation. Students meet with their advisors before registering in one of the on-campus computer labs.

You could definitely feel it in the air, and you could almost touch it: the excitement of the class of 2011 to finally be at Clemson University as undergraduates. Orientation is always an exciting experience and this year was no different. Freshmen and transfer students came from all over the country and world to get their first taste of college life.

One of the highlights of the weekend came at the beginning of the sessions with the Orientation Ambassadors performing currently popular songs with the words switched up to reflect life at Clemson University. Each evening included social events for the students to hang out away from the always-present watchful eyes of the parents. For many present this was a chance to get to know the Clemson campus that is not seen on game days.

At Orientation, one way to assuage freshman fears was with small group sessions facilitated by the Orientation Ambassadors—students were able to get to know each other and see familiar faces on campus when they moved in on August 18th. Another rite of passage occurred at Orientation: registering for classes. Each student met with his or her advisor and selected the classes that would best fulfill the degree plan without overwhelming the student.

"Move in day was very hectic and very stressful, but the move in volunteers eased our stress levels and made my first few moments as an official Clemson tiger great!"
Jesse Ofendo Reyes, freshman

Watch out! On move-in days, the hallways turn into an obstacle course.

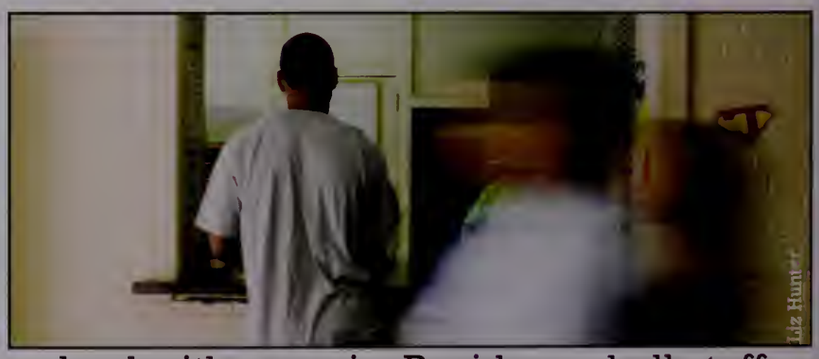
Trying to decide what to bring from home is always a struggle, but once you and your roommate get everything unpacked, it seems like too much.

"Move in day was overwhelming, but in a good way. It was long, but fun, and at the end of the day, I really felt like I had just moved into my new home."
Sallie Anna Barton, freshman

August 18th marked the start of a new experience for many students. At eight in the morning, 2,866 freshman, transfer, and international students began moving in to their new home-away-from-home. It was a warm, sunny day, but despite the heat, energetic students and parents unpacked carloads of dorm room essentials.

Liz Hunter

The First Year Experience (FYE) dorms the freshmen moved into were Lever, Manning, Byrnes, and Mauldin on east campus, and Johnstone, Geer, Cope, Benet, Young, and Sanders on west campus. FYE dorms are communities built to enhance the experience of first-year students. Through the FYE program, students can find ways to get involved and make an easy transition into college.



Liz Hunter

Freshmen were not the only students involved with move-in. Residence hall staffers had returned to campus ten days prior to prepare for the students' arrival. Many campus organizations were volunteering their time to help the students get all of their stuff up to their room. Move-in day ended with the first freshman social event: Freshman Frenzy on Bowman Field, which was a chance for new students to take a break from unpacking, get some food, and meet some of their new peers.

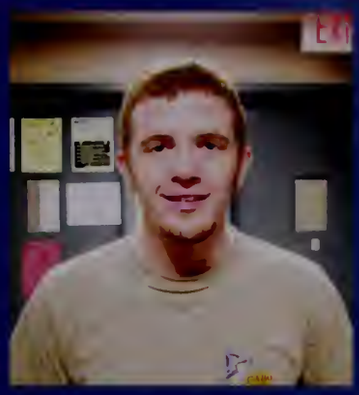
Mothers, fathers, brothers, sisters, grandparents and significant others come from all over to help students move onto campus.

"It was a lot of hard work, but it was cool to be able to help out and meet new people."
Kathleen Culhan, move-in volunteer

August in Clemson is already hot, but usually seems to be hotter than normal on move-in day! It helps to have the move-in crews there to keep the trips up and down the stairs to a minimum.



"Move in day for me was an exciting yet stressful day. I didn't realize that being an RA required so much responsibility."

The Welcome Back Festival is always an event students, faculty and Clemson-area residents enjoy. Music was provided by Hot 98.1, which broadcast live from College Avenue. Entertainment was supplied by the Clemson Rally Cats, cheerleaders and Tiger mascot. With everyone hanging out downtown for most of the evening before heading to Bowman Field for the Bowman Block Party, the Clemson Student Alumni Council and Clemson Alumni Association put on an event that will be hard to top!

Welcome Back Festival

August 21st signalled the beginning of the new school year with the annual Welcome Back Festival. Over 60 local businesses and university organizations lined College Avenue armed with loads of samples, prizes, and raffles for students, employees and community members to enjoy. Hot 98.1 featured background entertainment as attendees took the opportunity to relax and mingle with friends before hitting the books.

Following an exciting shopping spree through downtown Clemson, students migrated to the Bowman Block Party hauling their Bi-Lo bags brimming with free T-shirts, koozies, pompoms, and coupons. President Barker began the party with a speech. Next, the freshmen got a chance to test their Tiger Spirit when the Clemson Rally Cats and cheerleaders led the crowd in the C-L-E-M-S-O-N chant. Soon, the focus shifted to the stage for performances from bands including Elf Power, The Rosebuds, Five Times August, David Dondero, and Anthony David. Students sprawled out across Bowman Field and enjoyed the free entertainment into the wee hours of the night.

Recruitment

beginning a new chapter

The men and women of Clemson University take a new step in their life during Recruitment week 2007.

The pressures of college hit new and returning students during the first weeks of school. There is the stress of leaving home, moving in, starting classes, meeting new people, and recruitment. Recruitment is the process that students undergo when they choose to rush a fraternity or sorority. About twenty percent of Clemson's undergraduates participate in Greek Life.

Clemson's Greek community consists of three councils. The Interfraternity Council consists of 21 fraternities. The National Pan-Hellenic Council consists of 10 sororities. The College Pan-Hellenic Council consists of 9 sororities and fraternities. Through participation in a fraternity or sorority at Clemson University, students are able to learn leadership, academic, financial and philanthropic skills that they can take with them after graduation, in addition to the life-long friendship of their brothers and sisters. For the 2007 fall academic semester, 591 women and 587 men participated in recruitment.

During the sorority recruitment process, women go through a selection process in which they visit all ten sororities on the first day. "The first day of rush is very hectic. We had to wake up very early and all ten sororities were in Littlejohn yelling and cheering. It was a very exhausting day," says Meghan Joseph, a junior, who went through the stressful week just two years ago. "It's still very exhausting and stressful even after you join a sorority," she adds. As the week progresses, the women narrow down their decision until Bid Day, when the long wait is finally over and they become part of a new family.

The men's recruitment week is a little less stressful. The week after sorority recruitment sees Bowman Field covered in fraternity tents as the men go from one to the other signing up to rush. Just like sorority recruitment, the men go to different "parties" all week, narrowing their decision. On Friday, the men receive their bid and celebrate with all the new brothers with Rush Blowout.

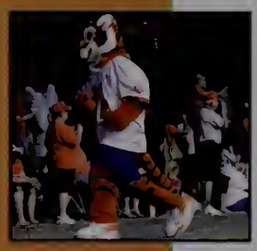
1. The Tiger and Tiger Cub are always crowd-pleasers at the First Friday Parade, even when it is on a Sunday!

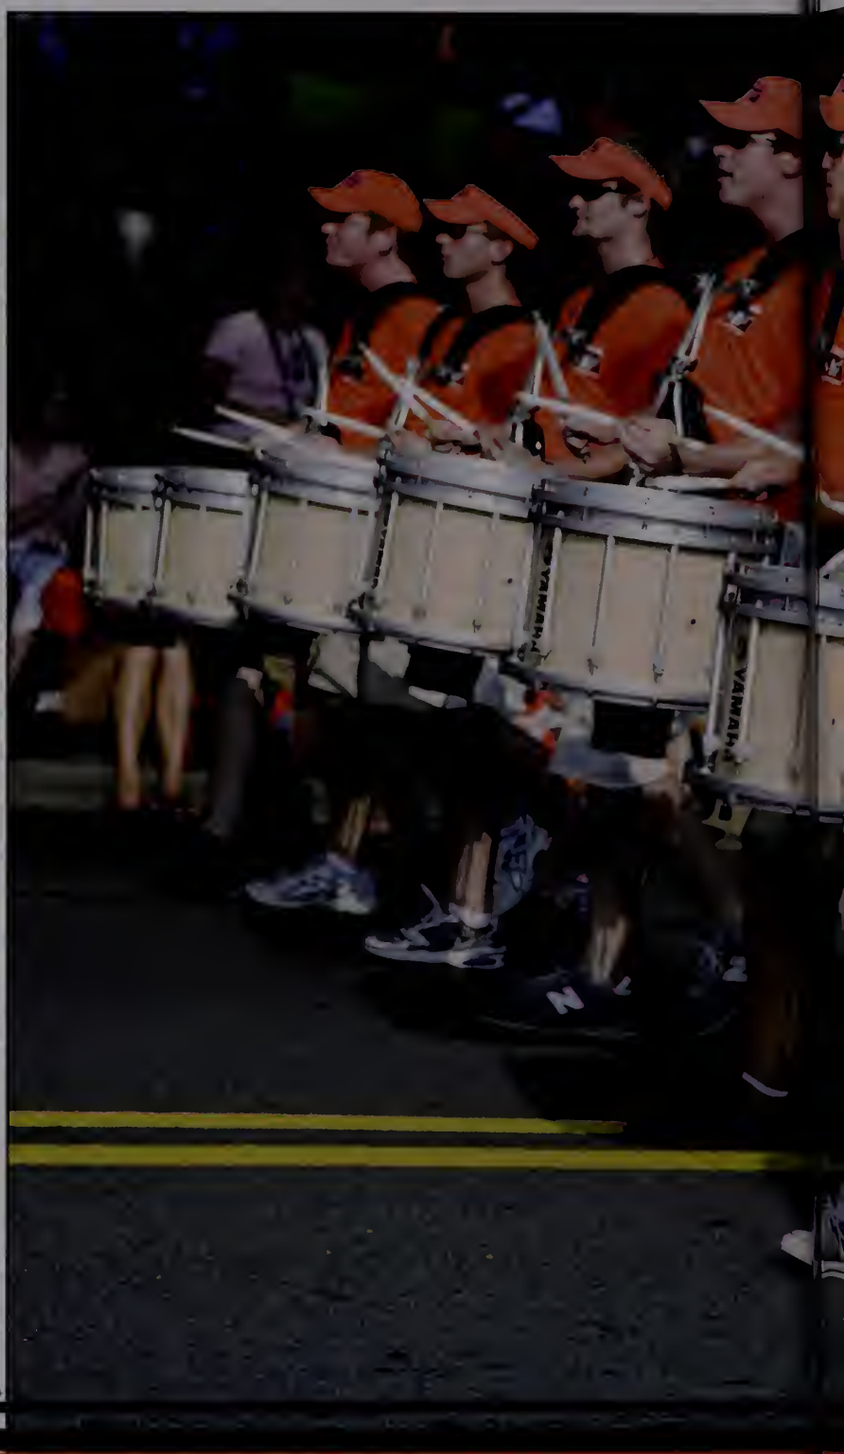


2. The Grand Marshall for this year's parade was Jeff Davis, who helped lead the 1981 Clemson University football team to a national championship.

3. First Friday Parade has always been known for its floats and this year was no exception.

4. Sororities always participate in the parade by building floats around the year's theme and marching behind them during the parade.

5. This year's Miss First Friday was a representative from Alpha Delta Pi.



First Friday

The history of the First Friday parade began in 1974. Every year Central Spirit hosts the parade to celebrate the beginning of football season, but also to mark a tradition that has been a part of many memories over the years

This year the First Friday Parade was held on Sunday due to the televising of the Bowden Bowl on ESPN on Monday night. Students, parents, and local-area residents, came out to watch the parade make its way down Highway 93. Floats, designed by the sororities, were featured alongside the Tiger Band, Rally Cats, Clemson cheerleaders, and many participating fans. At the end of the parade, fans gathered at Riggs Field for a school-wide pep rally, when everyone found out the winner of the title, Miss First Friday.

NOW AND THEN

The Clemson Cheerleaders and Rally Cats have always been a part of getting Clemson football fans excited about the upcoming seasons.

1. The Jones and Pascal families enjoy food and camaraderie at their tailgate before the big game.

2. Family Weekend is the perfect opportunity for Tiger fans young and old to visit the campus.

3. For some parents, Family Weekend is their first taste of Clemson football and the atmosphere in Death Valley.

Early each fall, Clemson University students are invited to have their family and friends come and experience their chosen school.

The University welcomes families from everywhere in the world and Family Weekend is guaranteed to be a good time for all who attend. During Family Weekend, Clemson students visit with family, friends, staff, and faculty over food and fun.

This year's events included receptions, concerts, and the opportunity for the Clemson family to bond. Parents were able to meet with members of Clemson's administration, faculty and staff, and of course the deans of their student's respective college.

The Jo Dee Messina concert on Friday evening provided families a chance to listen to good music. Other fun events included a parents' tailgate, which was hosted by the Parents' Council.

The excitement didn't stop there, as immediately following was the centerpiece of the entire weekend: a victory at the Clemson-Furman football game.

Homecoming

Homecoming is a special Clemson University tradition in which students and alumni take part in a weekend full of football, floats, and fun. The week leading up to Homecoming consists of lots of activity and building on Bowman Field. This includes fraternities building floats and students volunteering to build a home for Habitat for Humanity. Another Clemson tradition is the crowning of Miss Homecoming at Tigerama, which is the annual pep rally held the evening before the football game. Tigerama is filled with skits performed by student organizations as well as a performance by the Tiger Band. Homecoming has been a Clemson tradition for many years and will continue to be for many years to come.

The festivities were emceed by Jane Jenkins Herlong. In addition to being a lifelong Clemson fan and former Miss South Carolina, Ms. Jenkins is a professional speaker and has hosted numerous events across the country.

Student organizations participating in the show included the Tiger Band, Clemson University Rally Cats and Cheerleaders, Tigeroar and Pershing Rifles.

One of the most anticipated moments at every Tigerama is the crowning of Miss Homecoming, and this year's winner was Lindsey Sporrer, representing Alpha Delta Pi.

A new tradition began on the lawn of Littlejohn, called "Tailgate Tigerama." It included free food, games and music provided for the entire community. It also punctuated the finale of the show with a nearly twenty minute fireworks display.

Every football season, one football game sends all of South Carolina into a frenzy. The rivalry between Clemson and the University of South Carolina has endured for over a hundred years, and will not be slowing down any time soon. Clemson continues to dominate their in-state rivals with a 64-37-4 record.

Held at each school on alternate seasons, this year's game was a home game for USC, who hoped to win at Williams-Brice Stadium following four consecutive defeats.

However, the Tigers managed two spectacular blocked kicks during the game, and kicker Mark Buchholz, despite missing two kicks earlier in the game, made a 35-yard kick as time expired to secure a 23-21 victory for Clemson.

No matter if the rivalry game is held at home or away, Clemson fans show up in large numbers for the game. When it comes to fans, there is nothing quite like a Clemson Tiger.

One World

The Clemson One World Project is a campus-wide forum for discussion on tolerance, breaking down barriers, and diversity. The idea began in 2007 as three graduate students decided to make Clemson a more tolerant and diverse campus. After raising their own funds through sponsors, last spring kicked off the first annual "One World Week."

The week dedicated to diversity featured 10,000 flags on Bowman Field representing a statistical display of hate crimes. It featured movies, speakers, and a Tunnel of Oppression, a dramatization of what some groups are exposed to. The week ended with a candlelight vigil. The week also included "Green Shoes," where green shoes were scattered around campus with notes attached, raising awareness about mental health issues.

One World also hosts fund-raisers like Up 'Til Dawn, sponsoring St. Jude's Children Hospital and Relay-for-Life, raising money for the American Cancer Society.

Mardi Gras Traditions

French for "Fat Tuesday," Mardi Gras is the last day of Carnival, the three days preceding Lent, taking place the day before Ash Wednesday.

The most popular celebration of this day in the United States is in New Orleans. This celebration features music, parades, floats, and other celebratory events to squeeze in before the start of Lent. If you are one to attend Mardi Gras, you will be surrounded by green, gold, and purple (the official colors of Mardi Gras), people in costumes, and of course, beads thrown from the floats that spectators catch and bring home as a memory of a great celebration.

Relay For Life is an annual overnight event that brings the Clemson community together to support and raise money for the American Cancer Society.

The mission of the Society is to eliminate cancer and save lives by supporting ground-breaking research, influencing public policies involving cancer, and educating citizens on how to prevent or detect cancer early.

This year, more than 1.3 million people will be diagnosed with cancer in the United States. Those are staggering statistics, but there is hope thanks to the efforts of Relay For Life of Clemson University.

Last year alone, more than 1,500 people in the Clemson community collectively raised over $144,000 dollars for the American Cancer Society Relay For Life.

This was due in part to the many campus organizations who form teams to help raise money for this cause.

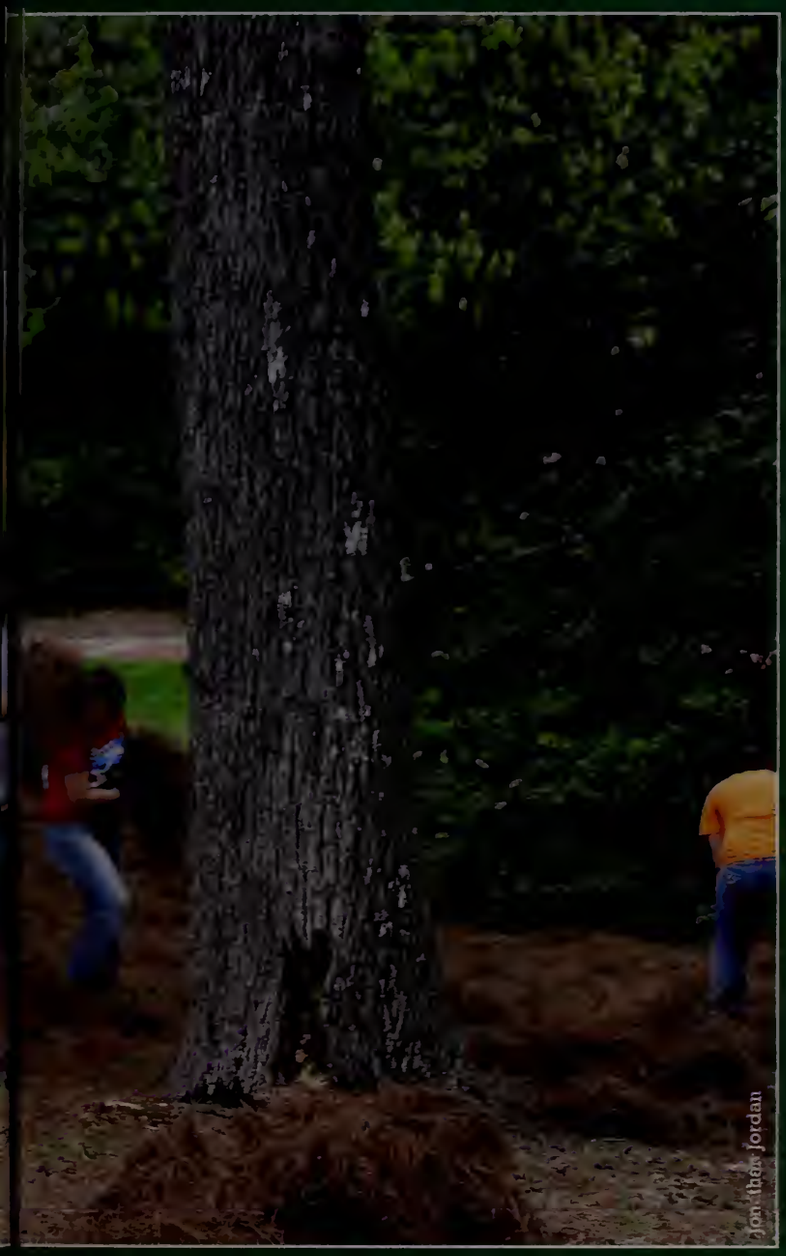
During Clemson Sweep, held on Friday, March 30, Clemson students, staff, faculty, and community members helped create a more "green" campus by spreading mulch and pine needles, planting flowers, draining and cleaning the library reflection pond. Work was also done in Abernathy Park and downtown Clemson with a special focus on litter pick-up. The day kicked off with a tree planting ceremony on the lawn of the President's Home.

Keeping it Green

"The true spirit of Clemson comes out in Campus Sweep. It is truly amazing to see students, faculty, staff and residents taking pride in our community by cleaning and beautifying the area," said Tyler Gailey, a junior political science major and student services director for Clemson's student government. "This year's Clemson Sweep will be the best one yet with new areas to clean, expanded coverage into the city of Clemson, and with the addition of Solid Green. I am very excited to see the finished result."



Students lay pine straw in the President's garden during Campus Sweep.

Tents were set up along Bowman Field to provide food and drinks for volunteers to take breaks.

Different organizations came together to help beautify Clemson. The ladies of Delta Sigma Theta graciously volunteered their time to Campus Sweep.

It was a long, hard workday for volunteers. In the end, though, it was well worth the effort.

Campus Sweep

Solid Green was founded to keep these surroundings a part of Clemson's community by promoting a "green" campus and make students more environmentally aware. In 2006, President Barker and Mayor Abernathy signed a proclamation declaring an anti-litter campaign.

Solid Green has since hosted annual Campus Sweeps where students and organizations clean and beautify the campus. Campus Sweep also focuses on Lake Hartwell, Downtown, and other surrounding areas. They have also established "Solid Green Day," the day after Homecoming when students and members of the community can help clean Bowman Field once the homecoming floats have been taken down. In another effort to help keep Clemson clean, the Students for Environmental Awareness have set up recycling bins all over campus.

Students can sit back, relax and enjoy a meal in one of Clemson's three major dinning halls. On the east side of campus, Schilletter Dining Hall is a good option for students looking for a comfortable place to catch up with friends during one of the many theme nights they host.

The East Side Food Court located within Hendrix Student Center has many options for people who cannot decide what exactly they want for lunch or dinner.

Schilletter Dining Hall is a popular choice for the many freshman living along Bryan Mall.

The Fernow Street Cafe is located just behind Riggs Hall and is great for grabbing a quick bite to eat in between classes.

Einstein Brothers' Bagels can satisfy any craving a student might have for a bagel or good cup of coffee.

In both Harcombe and Schilletter Dining Halls, students may watch as their food is prepared right before their eyes.

Dining

Delectable desserts, scrumptious sandwiches, hot homemade meals, and many more items are available to students on campus. There are three on-campus dining-halls: Schilletter, Clemson House, and Harcombe. Campus has three on-the-go or dine-in establishments: the Canteen, East Side Food Court, and Fernow Street Cafe. Clemson has two more formal restaurants: Chili's Too and Seasons by the Lake. Clemson has five coffee and snack shops: Java City, Snax & Stax, Loggia Latte, Einstein Brothers's Bagels, and Corner Stop Shop. Eating in any of these locations will make even the most homesick student feel better and ready to face their studies once again!

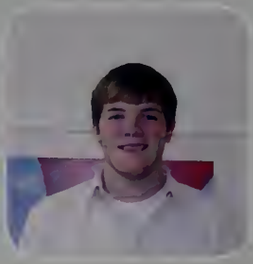
Sawyer Graham, freshman



"Being involved in school clubs and groups has been a big part of my first year experience and I love FYE."

Jesse Winchester, freshman

The First Year Experience begins at Orientation with freshmen getting a better idea of what their first year at Clemson University will be like.

During the first week of the fall semester, freshmen were able to participate in the Freshman Olympics. The event was a great way to bond with new hallmates and meet others outside of their dorm.

Freshman have many things to think about and worry over when making the transition to college. At Clemson, the First Year Experience (FYE) program is there to help.

The purpose of FYE is to enhance the freshman experience through creating programs and service opportunities promoting the mission of Clemson University. FYE also serves as a campus resource to new students. The cornerstones of the program are Academic Success, Civic Engagement, Community Development, and Interpersonal Development and are displayed throughout the freshman communities.

Exclusive Freshman Events

Freshman First Week is a way for freshmen to get acclimated to Clemson University and meet their peers through a movie night, social, diversity training, and Freshmen Frenzy.

The Freshmen Olympics take place in the fall with freshmen residence halls competing for bragging rights that will last until the next academic year.

The Freshmen Summer Reading provides an opportunity for the entire freshmen class to read the same book and attend a seminar with the book's author.

This year, for the first time, ClemsonLiVE hosted the EMpower Blitz Tailgate. The freshmen residence hall with the most attendance had the opportunity to design their own T-shirt.

Felicia Porter

These freshmen wasted no time in getting down.

A DJ was on hand to keep the party going all night!

With good food and good friends, it would be hard to not have a good time at the Moonlight Breakfast.

Dancing is a great way to get rid of stress that accompanies exams!

Felicia Porter

The dance floor at Schilletter was filled with dance moves both new (Soulja Boy) and old (shopping cart), which allowed freshmen to really let loose and forget for just a few minutes about their chemistry or economics exam.

Moonlight Breakfast

Students who walked by Schilletter Dining Hall very late on December 5th would have found Schilletter in full swing as if it was noon instead of midnight.

One of Clemson's many freshman events, the Moonlight Breakfast is an opportunity for freshmen to take a break from studying during their first exam week, relax, and have a good time with their friends. ClemsonLiVE, First Year Experience, and the Resident Housing Association worked together to host a great breakfast with a DJ turning the dining hall into the best study break-dance spot on campus.

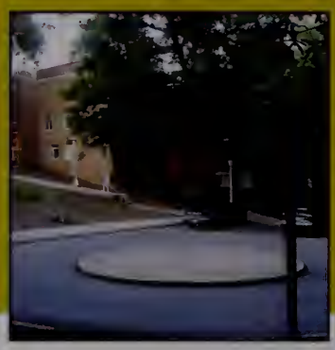
The High Rises



Calhoun Courts

The Woodlands

As diverse as the students on campus, Clemson housing offers much variety for people interested in all types of residences. Housing choices vary from on-campus to off-campus, from suite style to hall style, from single sex to co-ed, from Greeks to athletics. Each residence hall offers a vastly different experience for each student's 'home away from home.'

Housing location is everything. It's the age old debate of which is better: East versus West. On the East Side of Campus students are a short trip from Schilletter Dining Hall, the Hendrix Student Center, and Downtown Clemson. Students on the West side of campus has a much closer trip to sporting facilities such as Death Valley and Littlejohn, Harcombe Dining Hall, and the Student Union.

Of course, if on-campus living is not preferable, there are also numerous apartments located around Clemson. Despite commuting for classes, off-campus housing has numerous benefits. Such benefits include swimming pools, clubhouses, free massages, and tanning beds. All in all, housing at Clemson is a fantastic way to enhance your experience as a Tiger, and each student has found a place to call home here at Clemson.

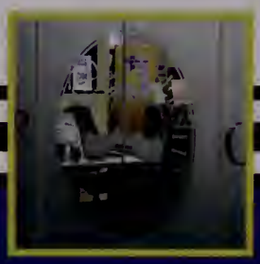
Career Center



From Clemson to Career

What should an undergraduate student do when they have no idea what they should major in? Where does a graduate student go when they are interested in obtaining an internship or apprenticeship? The students visit the Michelin® Career Center in Hendrix Student Center.

The Career Center is available to all interested students who need help narrowing down their degree options. The Career Center offers services ranging from personality testing to one-on-one meetings to determine which path best fits each student's abilities and needs.

The Career Center also maintains a searchable online database of seasonal, part-time, and full time jobs. In addition the database also contains internship opportunities and a list of previous employers who have posted on the web site. Once you land an interview for that perfect position the Career Center would be happy to critique your resume and hold a mock interview to make sure you are as prepared as possible to land the job of your dreams.

Story by Katherine Holland

Each May, the Michelin® Career Center develops a list of goals they would like to meet for the upcoming school year. For the 2007-2008 academic year, one of the main goals is to identify new industries to develop recruiting relationships, which will continue to expand the variety of opportunities available.

If students are not able to stop by the Career Center in the Hendrix Student Center, they can search for full-time, part-time and internship positions from the comfort of their living room with ClemsonJobLink. Through this online program, students can upload their resumes, search for and apply for jobs ,and schedule on-campus interviews. Employers use ClemsonJobLink to post jobs, search resumes uploaded by students and schedule on-campus interviews. Faculty members and first-year alumni are not left out on ClemsonJobLink; they are able to search available positions and review on-campus interview schedules as well.

If a student has not decided on what career path they are interested in taking, advisors at the Career Center will be able to help the student narrow their area of focus with career assessment tests and counseling. The assessments will be able to help the student determine their personality type and the careers or occupations that would fit him or her best. Based on these results, the Career Center advisors can guide students toward the majors that best fit their preferred career path and occupations.

Fike Recreation Center boasts a relatively new five-court gym, a weight room, many machines, a rock climbing wall and swimming pool. If students prefer to workout with a group, Fike also offers many classes, including yoga and kick-boxing in their multi-purpose rooms.

Students go to Fike to get a good work out and just get away from their studies. Hopping on the treadmill is a great way to work out and for students listen to their favorite tunes or watch their favorite television shows with the cardio machines' entertainment consoles.

A Step Up in Health

Working out is a vital part of living a healthy life, but many college students nd it unenjoyable or tedious. Swann Fitness Center at the Fike Field House is ot the typical gym Clemson University students are familiar with. Whether a erson is coming to play a little bit of pick-up basketball with friends or to get in a quick work-out etween classes, there is something for everyone.

The aerobic area features treadmills, elliptical machines, stair steppers, and stationary bikes. ıst a foot away is the weight area equipped to assist the casual lifter who wants a heart pump-ıg workout, or someone who wants to bulk up. Fike has a nice basketball gym boasting five ıll-length courts that provide students and faculty the option to show-off their skills in a pick-up ame or two. The Recreation Center also has all-purpose rooms, racquetball courts, a pool, and rock climbing wall. If students, faculty, staff, and local area residents are looking for a great ork out, a little bit of fun, and just about anything else for a healthy lifestyle, then Fike is the lace for them.

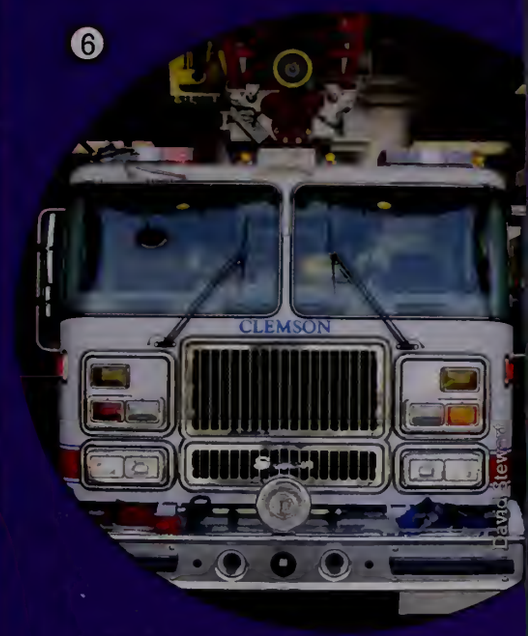
5. Clemson University Fire/ EMS and Police Department work at every home football game to keep the Solid Orange fans safe. There are approximately 50 Fire/ EMS employees and police employees on duty each game day working on various tasks including security, first aid rooms, and command posts.



6. Firefighters are always on the alert for potential calls. The fire engine sits ready in the garage for an emergency.

On the far east side of Clemson University's beautiful campus stands a very important place many students might take for granted. With a full house of 25 full-time professional employees, 21 part-time employees, two fire engines, two ladders, two ambulances and a mini-pumper, the Clemson University Fire Department responds to fire, full paramedic, and suppression to the University and the city of Clemson. Captain Bill Shivar said the Clemson Fire & EMS is "one, if not the only organization that doesn't emphasize 'if you graduate,' our primary goal is to keep you safe to go back home to mom and dad."

Across campus in the basement of the Memorial Stadium Ticket Office is the headquarters for the Clemson University police department. The CUPD is organized into three shifts which work 24 hours a day, seven days week. Officers conduct visible patrols, respond to reports of crimes, address problems, and provide information and resources to the community. As a part of the CUPD, the Auxiliary Student Patrol is responsible for the very convenient white vans that transport students from one side of campus to the other after dark. The Student Auxiliary Patrol is also responsible for building security and special event security.

Story by Jessica Davis

Clemson strives to be a pedestrian-friendly campus, and walking remains the primary transportation on campus, especially between classes as students do not have to chain their bike or park their motorcycle. Additionally, commuting students can be closest to their class, get to class on time, and then jump back on the bus.

Lindsey Hammond

The advantages of commuting to campus and catching the CAT bus:
- The bus stops right at all the busiest hubs around campus.
- The buses are climate controlled! No more sweating in the summer and freezing in the winter!

The advantages of riding a motorcycle or moped:
- Parking convenience is second to none.
- Easy to navigate tight spots around campus.

Transportation

Lindsey Hammond

Navigating around Clemson campus can be tricky, especially on crowded home football game days in the fall. Depending on a student's needs, means of transportation may differ.

For students living on campus, walking is the most popular way to go. However, some who live in dorms or in campus apartments often need a quick way to class in the morning and choose to ride bikes to class. Those riding bikes are notorious for side-swiping innocent bystanders during the fifteen minute scramble between classes.

An equally convenient but less common way of getting around is on motorcycle or moped. Many buildings on campus have special parking spaces practically at their front doors purely for those who choose to get to class this way.

For students living off campus or in Lightsey Bridge, the CAT bus system is a life saver. The system saw a huge increase in the number of riders this year, as the Red Route from Central was expanded. Students lined up waiting for the Orange Route to the parking lots or the Blue Route to Seneca are also a common sight.

Whether on campus or off, students were provided with several choices for making it to classes on time. They have no excuses for being late!

Story and Photos by Lindsey Hammond

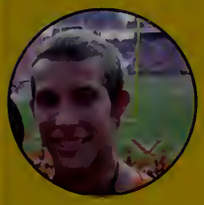
Lindsey Hammond

What is the best way to get around?



"I have a class in P&A, and coming from where I live in Cope, it's just easier and faster for me to ride my bike across campus."
-Austin Hammond, freshman

"This was my first year living off-campus, and I was surprised at how easy it was to drive to campus and take the CAT bus to class."
-Kelsey Darity, senior

"Living in Calhoun Courts this year requires a little more time to walk to class than last year, but it's worth the extra five minutes!"
-Stephanie Butler, sophomore

Clemson students stagger awake and head off to class, but what happens when one class ends and the next has yet to begin? Every student has their own quirks about how to spend time between classes.

Leah Worthy typically finds a way to feed her coffee cravings between classes and because she keeps such a busy schedule, she contends that coffee may serve as a meal. Vending machines also hold a special place in her heart.

Only so much caffeine can be effective, which means naptime during the day is a must. Drew Anne Westmoreland is particularly fond of taking naps on benches in the Carillon Gardens where she can enjoy the comforts of the great outdoors while dozing off. Brent Lodge, enjoys naps at his apartment between and after classes, while other students like William Hastings and Brad Tchouros forego either productivity or rest for video games.

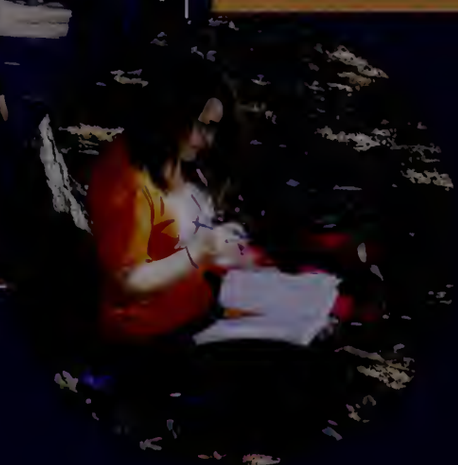
Class Change

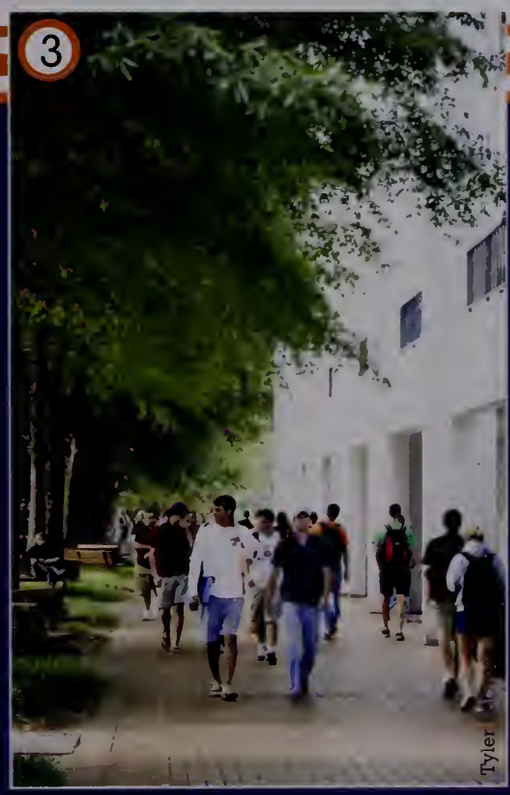
Tyler Lao

The relative silence and loneliness of campus during class is periodically broken by the crowded rush that is class change. The sidewalk between Martin and Hardin Halls, past the Amphitheater, is a major passageway for foot traffic.

Students often take advantage of what time they have on campus waiting for their next class to study or complete a nagging assignment.



The always-crowded library bridge remains the central hub of activity for the entire campus.



1. The time between classes is a great time to catch up with friends and discuss upcoming tests.

2. A sunny afternoon at the amphitheater might be the most pleasant time and place to study on campus.

3. The walk past the east end of the library, once connecting mostly with the Ag Quad, now takes students to the Brooks Center.

4. Even later in the afternoon, when campus is emptying out, the library bridge is travelled enough to make it an excellent spot for student organizations to set up booths or for students to give out free high-fives.

Where do you go to shop, eat, relax, or just to have fun with friends when you're i no mood to go to Greenville or Anderson?

Ask any Tiger and he or she will tell you, "Let's go downtown," to the place with little something for everyone. Tailgating

Game days in Tiger Town have been an institution for Clemson families, who have perfected the ritual of tailgating . Many "professional" tailgaters have televisions, stereos and grills stuffed in their memorabilia-plastered vehicle. Some arrive on campus in campers or RVs days before to get a head-start on the festivities. Soon campus is filled with fans wearing orange – from the Clemson baseball cap on their head to the bright orange Crocs on their feet.

Lots of rituals have grown up around the tailgating institution, like the increasingly popular "Cornhole." The objective is to toss a bag of corn through a hole in a wooden box twenty feet away. Since people are waiting for kickoff, tossing a football around is a logical component of tailgating on game days. Tailgating is always a great time to try one of these easily portable games and enjoy the day with family and friends. Story by Brittany Bundrick

Death Valley would not be Death Valley without Howard's Rock.

"The Rock," which is rubbed by all Clemson coaches and players before running down the hill into Memorial Stadium at the beginning of every game, was brought to Clemson University in 1919 from Death Valley, California by alumnus S.C. Jones.

Named for legendary Coach Frank Howard, the rock was placed atop a pedestal on September 24, 1966. Before the Clemson-Wake Forest game on September 23, 1967, Howard told his players they were only able to rub the rock if they were going to give him 110 percent in the game. After a 23-6 victory over Wake Forest, a tradition was born.

Traditions

Ring Ceremony

Clemson is steeped in tradition, be it running down the Hill into Death Valley or the annual construction of Homecoming displays, but one of the most notable is the ring ceremony.

The ceremony is co-sponsored by the Clemson University Alumni Association and the Student Alumni Association. University rings are offered only to students who have completed ninety credit hours. At the ceremony, students hear from alumni whose rings have meant much to them and also learn the detailed history of the ring's elements.

Though Clemson rings date to the 1890s, the modern ring comes from 1940. A group of architecture seniors decided at that time to design a ring that would be seen and recognized by Clemson students and alumni from all over the world. In July of that year, their design was adopted as the official Clemson University ring. When women were admitted in 1955, another style of ring was designed and accepted for the women in time for the first female graduates in 1957.

Memorials

While Clemson experienced many joys throughout 2007, the year was also marked with the losses of students and faculty. The Clemson family mourned the loss of students Taylor Cox, Amy Moxie, Adam Newton, Whitney Krozier, Savannah Edgar, Ralph "R.J." Pinnock, Jr., Charles Stoney, Tracy Connelly, Randall McNeal, Emily Yelton, Marc Cocozzella, Benjamin Sprague and Patti Ann Sylvia. In addition to these students, Clemson also lost six professors and staff: John Robert Duncan, Michael "Mickey" Marcengill, Sunny Daily Joseph Philip Rogers, John Douglas Davenport, Randall Marshall McNeal and Cecil Godley.

With each death, students and faculty joined together to celebrate the life and mourn their loss, truly embracing President Barker's vision of "One Clemson." Memorial services were held and funds were established to honor these precious members of the Clemson community. While these beloved students and faculty may not be at Clemson physically any more their legacies will live on in the hearts of fellow Clemson Tigers whose lives they have touched forever.

Riggs Hall, one of the older buildings on campus, is receiving a makeover. Inside, new drywall and a fresh coat of paint can be found. Outside, every window must be removed, re-painted, and re-grouted. Special care has to be taken to preserve the delicate windows within this historic building; each must be sent off and carefully restored.

These projects are necessary to improve the condition of Clemson's campus. Whether it is making an older building look new, adapting old technology to keep up with today's demands, or making a library more comfortable for hard-working Clemson students, keeping the campus up-to-date is a key step to fulfill President Barker's goal of becoming a Top 20 school.

Story by Tyler LaCross

Construction

This year, several major Clemson landmarks underwent much-needed construction and renovation. Among the buildings chosen for construction projects are the Cooper Library, the steam plant in the University Facility Operations building, and Riggs Hall. Since students arrived on campus this fall, the Cooper Library lawn has been partially covered with construction materials and equipment for an overhaul of the library's HVAC system. Upon its completion, the library will be a more comfortable place for hard-working students to study.

The steam plant next to the stadium is also receiving some upgrades. The baghouse, a filter that removes excess coal from the plant's exhaust, is being replaced. The new baghouse will remove 100% of the unburned coal from the plant's exhaust, which is equal to the removal of several tons of coal particulate daily from the plant's exhaust. This $3.2 million project is scheduled to be completed in March of 2008.

Clemson Bests

Clemson attracts many to its campus year after year. The small-town atmosphere and beautiful landscape at the edge of the mountains seem to satisfy everyone that comes to visit. Easy living, long-lasting traditions, great restaurants, and places to spend free time are some of the attractions Clemson offers its guests and residents.

Out of all these activities, what is the best Clemson and the surrounding area have to offer? After polling many students regarding the best places to eat, live, and spend free time, it is apparent Clemson has many bests. The most popular places to eat are Mac's Drive-In, Pot-Belly Deli, Calhoun Corners, and Sonic Drive-In. Many students believe University Ridge, Crawford Falls, and The Retreat are the best places to live, while the best places to spend free time are Bowman Field and Larry W. Abernathy Waterfront Park. All of these attractions truly make the University and the surrounding community the best places to live or visit just for a brief period.

The Best Traditions

Some of the most potent attractions of Clemson are the traditions the institution holds.

These traditions are what make Clemson so unique and help to make students fall in love with the University time after time. Some of the best traditions include Solid Orange Fridays, running down the Hill at football games, the Ring Ceremony for seniors, the homecoming floats on Bowman Field, Christmas music played on the Tillman Hall bells, and President Barker opening the President's Home for students to visit.

There is little wonder that Clemson, with its wealth of heritage, can hold so many loyal fans and alumni.

Summer, the longest of all breaks, give students a chance to do an internship, worl at home, live in another city, or do some studying abroad. Italy, France, Belgium Austria, and England are all favored spot to both study and sightsee.

Spring Break is another chance for student to get some well-deserved rest. Student might opt for a trip to the Bahamas, Panama City Mexico, or the Caribbean, since most prefer warme climates, the beach, the ocean, and a nice new tan.

Even Winter Break gives students a chance to trave to visit relatives, go skiing in the mountains, take a Ne Year's cruise with friends, or take a trip across the bi blue ocean for a European vacation.

Breaks

As August draws to a close, students wait anxiously to get back to school and see the friends they have missed for three months. But as soon as school is in session, the itch returns for a break from the long nights of studying that run into early mornings, the endless hours in Cooper library, and the pages of mind-numbing reading for class.

Breaks give students a chance to let loose and travel. Some go home and visit their parents and relatives, some opt for a mission trip or a convention for a club, while others go for a weekend hiking and camping in the Blue Ridge mountains. Some take trips to visit friends at other universities, some take trips without set destinations. However they use their time, students know that they have an opportunity to relax, cool off, and take a badly needed break from the burden of classes, projects, presentations, and tests. Inside the Brooks Center

Each year, the Brooks Center hosts a season of plays. The Clemson Players, a student organization, co-sponsors the event. Along with producing and performing shows, Clemson Players also hosts workshops for anyone interested in performing arts.

Besides the 1,000 seat theater, the Center offers more intimate settings. There's a Black Box theater for smaller performances, dance studios, music rooms, and rehearsal studios.

Everyday, classes are held in the Brooks Center for Performing Arts for students, from dance to band to theater to vocals. The center also holds rooms for costume design with enormous closets full of costumes from productions of all sorts. While only the stage is visible, there is a lot more behind those curtains than one might initially imagine.

"Once on This Island" performed by the University of West Florida is a retelling of the Little Mermaid fable with a Caribbean feel.

The Clemson Jazz Ensemble performs many time through out the school year at the Brooks Center.

During the spring the Brooks Center hosts the yearly Shakespeare festival where people from all over the country come and perform his plays.

Members of the Clemson Symphony Orchestra concentrate on the conductor at a fall performance.

Performing Arts

Hosting shows throughout the entire year, the Brooks Center for erforming Arts is busy with plays, concerts, and more. This year, over 75 hows were performed, ranging from the Clemson Jazz Ensemble, Polly eale's play, "Jane Eyre," and out-of-state and international performances.

In general, the Brooks Center satisfies anyone's need for art here at lemson, whether it is for pure enjoyment or for a class. Some may think that is gem here on campus is only available to students, but Clemson area ocals also come to enjoy what the Brooks Center has to offer as do many thers.

Pageants

Homecoming Week always gets everyone excited about the Habitat build and displays on Bowman, but another major event comes when ladies from many campus organizations prepare for the Homecoming pageant. Held on September 27th in the Brooks Center, the pageant allowed contestants to show off their casual wear, evening wear, and discuss their involvement within the Clemson community.

The winner of this year's pageant was Lindsey Sporrer, a Junior Business Management major who is also involved in the Leadership Council, Clemson Senate, and Alpha Delta Pi sorority. This year's Homecoming court included Ashley Garris, April Smith, Erin Hunter, and Hannah Dillard. The winners were announced at Tigerama and rode on the float during the football game against Central Michigan.

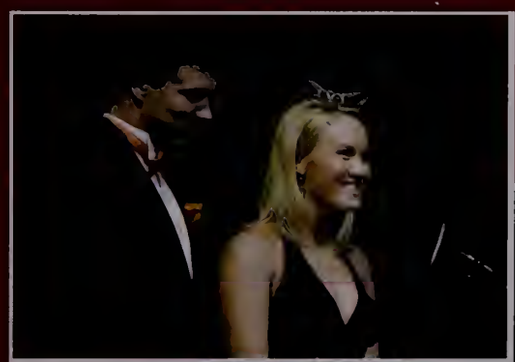
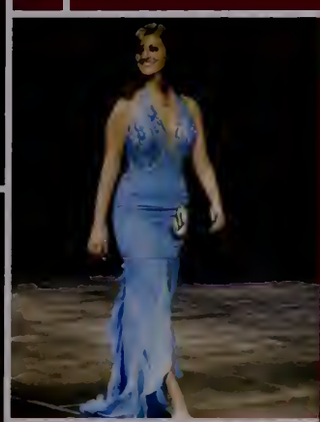
Miss Clemson

The Miss Clemson pageant takes place every spring semester. In order to qualify for the pageant, contestants must be single, registered female students at Clemson, and have the required grade point ratio for graduation. The winner is chosen by a panel of judges who base their choice on contestants' stage presence, poise, and personality.





The competition includes a talent presentation, evening gown, casual wear, and on-stage question competition. This year, the judges crowned Molly McPhail as Miss Clemson 2007.

California Wildfires

Wildfires broke out across Southern California in October 2007. These fires caused nine deaths, 85 injuries, and destroyed at least 1,500 homes. Fires broke out across Los Angeles and Ventura Counties, Orange County, San Bernardino County, Santa Barbara County, and Riverside County.

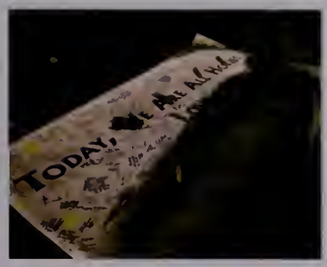
There were numerous causes and contributors to the fires, including a semi-truck overturning and deliberate arson. California wildfires happen every year, facilitated by the seasonal Santa Ana winds. Hopefully for the residents of Southern California, the fall of 2008 will not see any destruction as catastrophic.

Recalled toys could be found in stores all over the United States

China Recalls

2007 saw an array of recalled toys imported from China. Most toys recalled possessed traces of lead-paint. From Barbies, to Polly Pockets, to Go Diego Go, toys were constantly pulled off the shelves of Wal-Marts and Toys-R-Us stores throughout the country.

Consumer safety officials announced multiple recalls throughout the year. The recalls even spread into the area of poisonous toothpaste, cold medicine, and pet food, this time with large cases of deadly repercussions from over 100 tainted food brands. The massive pet food recalls had less national attention than the toys, though they all carry serious consequences for consumers.



Virginia Tech

On April 16, 2007, on the campus of Virginia Tech, 32 people were killed. The perpetrator, Seung-Hui Cho, killed 32 people and wounded many more, before committing suicide, making it the deadliest school shooting in American history.

There were two separate attacks on students on this date. The first attack was at a student dormitory, West Amber Johnston Hall, and the second one was at the Engineering Science and Mechanics building, Norris Hall. The names of the deceased victims of the Virginia Tech massacre can be found online at many of the memorial cites that have been created in their honor.

Beach House Fire

A South Carolinian Tragedy

Early on the morning of Sunday, October 28, 2007, a fire ravaged a beach house in Ocean Isle, NC, with over a dozen college students from the University of South Carolina and Clemson University inside. The fire took the lives of seven students and left six survivors who were hospitalized and released, including one student who jumped from the burning home into the nearby waterway.

Astronaut Arrested

NASA astronaut and Navy Captain Lisa Marie Nowak was charged in February 2007 for attempted murder and kidnapping of Air Force Captain Colleen Shipman. According to Nowak, Shipman was romantically involved with Space Shuttle pilot Bill Oefelein, whom Nowak claimed to be also involved with.

According to police, Nowak had planned to kidnap and murder Shipman, driving from Houston to Orlando while wearing diapers to avoid stopping. She possessed a wig, trench coat, make-up, trash bags, knife, and ammunition. Nowak assaulted Shipman at the Orlando International Airport with pepper spray prior to her arrest.

Heath Ledger's Death

Hollywood came to a standstill on January 22, 2008 when the respected Academy Award nominee Heath Ledger was found dead in his New York City apartment. The cause of death was later determined to be an accidental overdose of sleep medication, not a suicide.

The actor was nominated for an Oscar for his 2005 role in Brokeback Mountain. The actor recently called off his engagement with actress Michelle Williams, best known for her role on Dawson's Creek, whom he met on the set of Brokeback Mountain. The couple had a 2-year-old daughter, Matilda.

Ledger's death came before the release of his last movie, The Dark Knight, in which he played the role of the Joker.

The Spears Sisters

The past year and more have been very publicly difficult for Britney and Jamie Lynn Spears.

Britney Spears, now a faded pop star, saw her troubles when now-ex-husband Kevin Federline filed for divorce and custody of their children, Sean Preston and Jayden James. Britney again attracted media attention when she shaved her head, verbally attacked paparazzi, and checked in several times in drug rehabilitation facilities. Her attempt at restoring her pop music career with a performance at 2007 Grammy Awards was harshly panned by critics.

Her younger sister, Jamie Lynn Spears, star of Nickelodeon's hit program Zoey 101, also received severely negative publicity when she became pregnant at the age of 16. While her pregnancy sparked an outcry from the parents of young viewers who viewed her as a role model, it also generated record ratings for the premiere of the show's fourth season.

Track and field star Marion Jones admitted to the use of performance enhancing steroids. Jones was stripped of all five medals won at the 2000 Summer Olympics in Sydney, Australia. She was suspended for two years from track and field and on October 5, 2007, Jones announced her retirement from the sport.

Barry Bonds

MLB San Francisco Giants player Barry Bonds had a year of ups and downs in 2007. In August, Bonds broke Hank Aaron's all-time home run record when he hit his 756th career home run. His count is currently up to 762. In November, he was indicted for perjury and obstruction of justice for his long-fought battle against his alleged steroid use. Bonds is under constant scrutiny for his alleged steroid use and continues to deny those allegations.

Don Imus

After racial remarks made on April 11, 2007 regarding the Rutgers women's basketball team, Don Imus was quickly suspended for two weeks. Although attempts were made to remedy the situation through various sources, tensions continued to grow. Shortly thereafter, Imus' 30-year tenure on NBC radio came to a abrupt end.

Michael Vick

Michael Vick, Atlanta Falcons quarterback, faced criminal charges this year in connection with a pit bull fighting ring in Smithfield, VA. Known as the "Bad Newz Kennels," the group trained pit bulls for death matches while betting on the outcome. Dogs that lost matches or lacked a fighting spirit were killed by electrocution, shooting, hanging or drowning.

Vick was alleged to have participated in killing of about eight dogs. As a result of helping fund the operation, Vick is serving a 23- month sentence at a U.S. Penitentiary.

Super Bowl XLII

This year, the New York Giants faced the New England Patriots, who went into the game undefeated and were hoping for a perfect season. Tom Brady's amazing passes matched with the Patriots great offense made for a terrific season. The Giant's quarterback Eli Manning hoped to defeat their opponents, despite the odds commentators were citing. On February 2, 2008, Plaxico Burress caught a pass to end the Patriot's perfect record.

Convocation

The annual Victor Hurst Convocation marked the beginning of the 115th academic year at Clemson University. The ceremony, which is named for the distinguished alumni professor of Dairy Science, featured speaker Stephen A. Smith, executive director of Southern Alliance for Clean Energy. President James Barker also spoke, highlighting Clemson's accomplishments, like its graduation rate of seventy-five percent.

The tradition of convocation brings together a committee chaired by the Provost and includes a representative from the staff commission, the faculty senate, the graduate student association, student government, collegiate deans, the registrar's office, the Brooks Center, Littlejohn Staff, and the deans of undergraduate and graduate studies. Students are also welcomed to the event, which includes a procession, a ceremony in the Brooks Center, followed a reception in the lobby.

President's Letter

October 11, 2007

)ear Clemson Students:

Since coming to Clemson University as a freshman in the late 1960s, I have been a Clemson tudent, alumnus, faculty member and administrator. It is a unique honor and privilege to be able to ead our alma mater as its president, and to represent you to the world beyond our campus.

Each Clemson group is important, but students are the heart of the university. You are our eason for being. You are our link to the future and, as alumni, you will always be a part of the Clemson Family.

I believe that each of you has the potential for true greatness, and it is our job to help you find our individual greatness and then go out and change the world.

In 2007, student news was front and center as we inaugurated a new chapter of Phi Beta Kappa n campus; celebrated 15 years of a student-led Habitat for Humanity chapter; opened a new uropean portal for study abroad students in Brussels, Belgium; announced plans to rebuild the tudent facilities of our core campus on a scale not seen since the 1960s; and moved to 27th out of 64 national public universities on the strength of our performance as a student-centered research niversity.

One of the qualities we never want to lose is the way Clemson combines the best of mall-college teaching and a great student experience with big-time science, engineering and esearch.

My wife, Marcia, and I live on campus, and our son is a student here. Sharing our home with tudents keeps us young. Thank you for enriching our lives and allowing us to be a part of your Clemson experience.

Go Tigers!

incerely,

ames F. Barker, FAIA

Top 20 Initiative

President Barker's long-standing drive towards Clemson becoming a Top 20 school achieved a notable breakthrough this year, when the school broke into the Top 30 rankings. The efforts of faculty and staff have already improved the quality of undergraduate and graduate programs, but despite the impressive achievements, there remains more work ahead.

Some of the initiative's goals already fulfilled include the establishment of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter, which will increase the value of a Clemson degree. Physical improvements for the Cooper library, better the resources available to students and the community. A capital campaign raising $250 million allowed Clemson to commission more research in every department. Clemson is attracting more top students, therefore achieving higher graduating averages.

"In order to maintain the momentum that has brought us from 74th nine years ago to 27th today in the US news rankings," said President Barker, "we need to continue to attract the brightest and best students, to increase resources to attract the best faculty, and to improve academic support services to help students stay in school and graduate."

Future goals for the school include producing a Rhodes Scholar and perhaps a national championship football team. The University plans to build a new Academic Success Center, in order to improve academic support services, bolster students' grades, and help them to graduate on time.

Why is Clemson so committed to this initiative? Students from a higher ranked universities are proven to be more likely to graduate on time, earn higher starting salaries, and to be admitted to the best graduate programs and professional schools. Top universities are better able to generate external funding, more spin-off and start-up companies, and attract more knowledge-based industries to cluster around them. This allows for increases in the economic support and per capita income in the university's state and region. President Barker said, "It is a win-win-win situation for the university, its students and alumni, and its region."

As Clemson continues this difficult, but rewarding journey, students, faculty, staff, and the whole community are benefiting. Clemson is the midst of a great change that will increase the value of being a student and the value of being an alumni.

Summer Reading

Since the Summer Reading Program began in 2003, freshmen have known that they will be required to read a novel chosen by the University. However, the common myth that the assignment and the required essay do not matter and do not have to be completed was corrected this year. Students were told the paper would be a required part of their E-Portfolio, which they must have to graduate. Also, in addition to reading the book and completing the essay assignment students would be required to attend the freshman convocation, including a seminar given by the book author. After the convocation ended, students would attend small group discussion sessions.

The 2007 summer reading assignment, The Ghost Map by Steven Johnson told the story of the widespread panic and epidemic of vibrio cholerae, also known as cholera, in London during the mid-eighteenth century. Students were asked to write about one of three topics which included: "Resistance to Innovation," "Ethical Values, Standards and Judgment," and "The Power of Fear." Johnson visited the Clemson University campus on August 21st and spoke on "Thinking across the Boundaries."

As students sat in Littlejohn Coliseum surrounded by over 3,000 classmates and faculty they listened to Steven Johnson and started to relate the cholera epidemic to current events. Due to Johnson's address, they began to understand why the book was chosen and started to appreciate and comprehend their reading.

Clemson's administration and organizers of the Summer Reading Program wanted to stimulate questions and conversations amongst the incoming class. It is very important for students to not only interact with one another socially and academically, but also interact with the Clemson faculty. Clemson University President, James Baker commented in his letter to 2007 freshmen, "The Summer Reading Program activities are the types of activities that are valued in college courses: critically reading a text, forming ideas based on your reading, discussing those ideas with faculty and other students, and writing about the ideas that grow out of your reading, talking, and listening. The close faculty-student interaction is at the heart of what it means to be a university."

Study Abroad

What if you were able to stand on the Eiffel Tower, see where the Berlin Wall once stood, climb Manchu Picchu or snorkel the Great Barrier Reef in Australia? It is all possible with the many study abroad programs available through the Clemson University Study Abroad Office.

Even if interested students do not know where or what they want to study, the Study Abroad Office is available to help them narrow their choices based on their geographical area of interest, area of study or the programs offered by the student's Clemson college. Even if a student is a biology major or think that with their major they cannot study abroad, the staff in the Study Abroad Office will be able to research available programs and make a student's dream of studying abroad a reality. Some of the more traditional places to study abroad include France, Spain, Australia and England, all of which have Clemson-sponsored or approved locations. For more adventurous students, Clemson offers study abroad programs in Argentina, China, Istanbul and South Africa.

Studying abroad allows students to step outside of their comfort zone and develop a wider perspective of the world they may not have had the opportunity to develop before. If that does not sound tempting enough, recent college graduates are finding that study abroad experience elevates their resumes to the top of a potential employer's hire list.

Excellence in Teaching

Professor Allen Swords received the 2007 Excellence in Teaching Award in a ceremony held on November 28, 2007 in the Madren Center.

Swords graduated from Clemson in 1997 with a Bachelor of Arts in English and a minor in Secondary Education and History. In 1999, he returned to Clemson to get his Master's degree in Art Literature. In the fall of 2000, he began teaching as a full-time graduate teacher and continued teaching two classes each semester for two academic years.

He received the English Department's Douglass Award for the Excellent Teaching Assistant of the Year in April 2002. He also received the honor of The Clemson University Visitors Board of Trustees Outstanding Graduate Assistant of the Year later that semester. He was offered a lecturer position in the English Department starting in the fall semester of 2002.

Now, Professor Swords generally teaches five courses per semester and also teaches during both summer school sessions. Getty Foundation grant to develop historical preservation plan

In the fall, Clemson received a $160,000 Campus Heritage grant to develop a historical preservation plan for the campus. The purpose of these grants from the Getty Foundation is to assist American universities with managing and preserving the integrity of their significant historic buildings, sites, and landscapes. The activities that will be funded include the development of a comprehensive inventory of Clemson's historic campus resources and an assessment of the potential eligibility of National Registry sites.

"Students will have the opportunity to participate in hands-on research, field work, research projects and independent studies allowing them to learn about preservation planning, techniques, approaches and interpretation," said Cari Goetcheus, a Clemson Landscape Architecture professor.

The Getty Foundation's Campus Heritage grants have allowed universities to fully understand the valu of their historic resources and take steps toward long-term preservation.

Rutland Institute for Ethics

Most Clemson students have heard about the Rutland Center because of its annual essay contest. However, the Institute has a much broader mission. It was established in 2000 with the support of Robert J. Rutland in dedication to his personal belief in ethical practices in all aspects of life, especially on a university campus.

Rutland, a Clemson alumnus, believes that ethics are the basis of all decisions, and he hopes that the center can help facilitate that discussion on campus. Furthermore, a solid ethical founding is an essential part of a Clemson education as witnessed by the university's mission statement; the Rutland Center clearly fulfills a need in the Clemson community.

Today, the Rutland Institute for Ethics calls Hardin Hall home. It is housed under the Department of Philosophy and Religion. The Institute has an Academic Advisory Panel which consists of representatives from each of Clemson's five colleges, the Graduate School, the library, Student Affairs, central administration as well as the Office of Distance and Continuing Education. This panel helps ensure fulfillment of the institute's mission to facilitate discussions about ethical issues both on and off campus.

The South Carolina Review

The South Carolina Review was first published at Furman University in 1968, t moved to Clemson University in 1973 and has been here ever since. The South rolina Review usually publishes literary works by aspiring American scholars d writers and very often well-known individuals in the literary society.

Those who are interested in being a part of South Carolina's premiere literary agazine can submit fiction, poetry, interviews, unpublished letters and manuscripts, says, and reviews.

For the past twelve years, the man in charge of this prestigious magazine is emson's very own professor, Dr. Wayne Chapman. The South Carolina Review lebrated its 40th anniversary this year and has planned a literary festival in spring 2008 in its honor. Over 30 issues of the Review are available online.

The College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences, CAFLS, serves more than 2700 undergraduate and graduate Clemson students.

This year, the College of Agriculture, Forestry, and Life Sciences welcomed a new dean, Dr. Alan Sams. Other exciting events for the college include hosting the annual South Carolina Turfgrass field day and receiving an $800,000 National Science Foundation Grant to expand biotechnical education in South Carolina.

CAFLS now has a larger Student Services Center in the Poole Agricultural Center, better knowı as the P&A building. They moved into their new offices in June 2007, needing more space so to extenc the services they offer.

They offer a multitude of career services to students in all twenty majors of the college, whicl include assistance with resume and cover letters, mock interviews, interviews with prospectiv employers, researching possible career paths, searching for internships, and career fairs.

The Student Services Center has its own career fair, which was held on October 3rd in the Hendri Student Center and had fifty-seven different employers present.

Switchgrass is a warm-season grass that can be grown in South Carolina to produce biofuels.

Biofuels

With its history in agriculture, caring for the land and for the environment has long been important to Clemson. With the national trend towards alternative fuel research, the university has again found itself at the forefront of research.

Biofuels from diesel made from restraint grease to E-85 Ethanol to switchgrass, are growing in demand. The industry has expanded from $39 billion dollars ten years ago over $198 billion dollars today, an increase of over 500%.

Clemson is giving swtichgrass high emphasis, especially since President Bush and his advisors have touted it as the fuel of the future. On July 2, 2007 the National Science Foundation gave Clemson University an $800,000 grant to expand technical education in South Carolina. This will primarily go towards creating courses across the state in bioprocessing industries, including biofuels.

Sonoco Institute Breaks Ground

The landscape near the Flour-Daniel building changed, as the Sonoco Institute of Packaging Design and Graphics broke ground in November. The Institute combined the Packaging Science and the Graphic Communications Departments to offer many opportunities to students. The Institute plans to contribute on three levels: an academic stimulator, an industry resource offering training and research, and a bringer of new technologies and innovations to the markets of packaging and graphic communications.

This institute will provide new technology that will assist in enhancing curriculum and provide a location for innovative research and training. The building will be completed next year. The research projects that it will host will rely a great deal on students, offering part time employment and graduate assistantships.

The College of Business and Behavioral Science (CBBS) aims to produce scholarly individuals who strive to contribute to the continuing improvement of society through leadership, entrepreneurship, and competition. The College places special emphasis on four key criteria that create a successful CBBS education. They are instruction, research, external relationships, and people. The faculty is committed to providing top-notch instruction and research opportunities for students. Additionally, CBBS sponsors several different opportunities for students to network and develop skills that will aid them well past graduation. Finally, the College is committed to attracting and developing a highly qualified, diverse group of faculty, staff, and students who continue to make the College of Business and Behavioral Science and Clemson University the success that it is today.

The I LEAD! Program

I LEAD! provides experiences, applications, and knowledge for students over the course of their career at Clemson to help cultivate leadership skills.

The program has many criteria for the certification of its participants. Students must attend at least five leadership seminars, which cover such topics as leadership ethics, leadership in action, and leadership theory. Students must meet with mentors in order to discuss how their leadership skills are developing. Each student's mentor is determined at the beginning of the program by the student's leadership interests.

By each student's senior year, he or she is expected to act as a resource for the students new to the program. Students must also have a role in the activities and workshops, give a public speech, shadow someone in their career field, have a leadership role in the community or on campus, be part of a group that demonstrates leadership, and create a leadership portfolio.

Graphic Communications

If you've ever walked across Bowman Field and paused for a moment to stop under the oak trees near Tillman to take in the beauty of the campus, you may have found your attention caught by one of Clemson's oldest buildings, Godfrey Hall. Built in 1898, Godfrey Hall was originally home to textiles but now houses the Graphic Communications department.

Stepping into Godfrey, you will find students learning the skills and techniques required for success in a fast-paced, deadline driven industry—the second largest segment in the American manufacturing community. Beginning in their very first class, students not only read and study their craft but are exposed to every aspect of the printing process. In addition to a hands-on learning environment, students are required participate in two internships over the course of their study.

The department is very serious about its students finding jobs before they graduate. Often, students are offered full-time positions at a company where they performed their internship.

Graphic Communications at Clemson is growing. Ground has recently been broken for the Harris A. Smith Building for Packaging Science and Graphics, a 28,000 square-foot building that will house components of both this department and that of Packaging Science.

Baier on Economic Council

Last summer, President Bush appointed economics professor Dr. Scott Baier to the Council of Economic Advisors (CEA). He will contribute to a biannual economic forecast for the country and a yearly economic report for the President. The CEA consists mostly of academic economists who can provide a fresh, non-partisan perspective on economic events, topics, or bills to the President and his cabinet.

"There is something special in the way the Economics Department at Clemson views the world," said Baier. "At Clemson, the faculty have consistently demonstrated that we can understand much about human behavior and markets by applying simple principles of neoclassical economics. At the Council of Economic Advisers, this methodology results in 'explanations' of real world phenomenon that are consistent with the observations and are not influenced by the politics of the Washington beltway."

Baier joined the John E. Walker Department of Economics at Clemson in 2001 after serving on the faculty at the Mendoza School of Business at Notre Dame University. He earned his Ph.D. from Michigan State University.

The Condor Pool, installed last December, went into use in March of 2007. The main purpose of the Condor system is to enable scientists to easily perform large-scale computations and organize a multitude of related tasks on multiple computers all at the same time. The older system that used by Clemson allowed users to run one job as fast as possible but not multiple jobs.

Professor of Computer Science Sebastien Goasguen and Industrial Engineering Professor Mary Beth Kurz contributed to the initiation of the Condor system. Kurz was the first person to harness the Condor grid for her research. The costs of Condor include one Windows administrator, which is a junior developer; one linux administrator, which is a senior developer; and one tester, a junior developer.

Just outside of Greenville, the final stage of the CU-ICAR campus is almost complete. The Carroll A. Campbell r. Graduate Engineering Center, the primary focus of the project, is a 90,000 square-foot research building that vill house state-of-the-art automotive research equipment. The project began in November 2003 with a vision to reate world-class facilities for automotive and motorsports research. In addition CU-ICAR will provide nternationally recognized graduate automotive engineering programs and will be the interface between the Jniversity and industry for the associated engineering, management, marketing and communication disciplines.

Over 10 companies including BMW, IBM and Michelin have partnered with Clemson to invest in this $213.8 nillion project. This includes a $40 million investment for 4 endowed chairs. As the current CU-ICAR dministration says, "This is the real deal." The location of the CU-ICAR campus was strategically chosen in rder to maximize exposure to the booming automobile manufacturing industry of upstate South Carolina on the tlanta-Charlotte corridor. In addition to being so close to BMW's manufacturing plant in Greer, South Carolina, U-ICAR is located in an area that is home to two-thirds of the nation's motorsports industry.

CU-ICAR is a truly a new and unique approach to higher education and it is said that it will produce a "new ind of engineer." 2008 Presidential Campaigns

Political involvement has emerged as an important focus at Clemson. Provost Dori Helms created the Clemson Seminar to enhance understanding and engagement of the political world among students, faculty, staff, and members of the community. She initiated the program in the Spring of 2002 as a response to the attacks of September 11th. As national politics have evolved and developed in many respects since then, the class has found the opportunity to explore a broad variety of issues.

With the upcoming presidential elections, the class has gained a new focus. This semester, Professor of Political Science Dr. David Woodard and Political Science Department Chair Joseph Stewart have worked together in order to ensure that students gain many perspectives on the election cycle. The class was designed to welcome candidates, pollsters, and everyone in between.

This year, the class was particularly instrumental because of South Carolina's own involvement in the 2008 Presidential Election. For the upcoming election, South Carolina is hosting the "First-in-the-South" Republican Party Presidential Primary. The class has been able to edify students and others on the presidential campaigns and the many aspects that influence voting. The class has also provided students a large amount of information, not just about the election, but about politics and elections in general.

The class met once a week for an entire semester. At the end of the course, students are expected to be enlightened on a number of political issues. Thanks to Provost Doris Helms, everyone can get the opportunity to have a deeper experience of the American democratic process.

IEEE Hardware Team

Every year, Clemson participates in the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers (IEEE) SoutheastCon hardware competition. The 2007 robotics team consisted of seven undergraduate students in Electrical and Computer Engineering (ECE). The competition consisted of a double elimination tournament. Over forty colleges registered for the competition and over thirty teams qualified.

The 2007 hardware competition, hosted in Richmond, Virginia, required students to design an autonomous robot which played a basketball-like game. The robot had to leave a starting box when an LED light came on. It was then required to travel to another section of the court to receive an infrared code. Afterward, it would move to another section and display the code to a judge. If the code was correct, the robot would receive three ping-pong balls. The robot could then shoot the ping-pong balls across the court into a hoop, with each goal worth ten points. After shooting the balls, the robot could receive a new infrared code and repeat the process.

The 2008 SoutheastCon hardware competition will be hosted in Huntsville, Alabama, with the theme of space exploration. The objective will be to find and receive boxes with Radio Frequency ID (RFID) tags placed on them. Each box will be worth a different amount with the team that received the most points emerging as the victor. The team must to learn to read RFID tags, identify objects based on color, and avoid the other robot on the playing field.

Cutaway Tractor

Ever wonder what you could do with a John Deere tractor that worked perfectly well, but you were not allowed to operate? Clemson Agricultural Mechanization and Business (Ag Mech) students were faced with this challenge two years ago after John Deere Commercial Products donated a 4520 PRT tractor for the department to use as an educational aid. The students and their advisor, Kendall Kirk, decided to cut "windows" through to the engine, exposing what happens on the inside. This cutaway engine model could not function as a better teaching aid—at its exhibition debut at the Sunbelt Ag Expo in Moultrie, GA in October 2007, the group was thrilled by the exclamations of "Oh! So that's how it works."

Making it possible to observe the entire power train in motion was no easy task. Each cut was carefully calculated to provide the largest possible viewing window without compromising bearing and shaft support or the alignment of the moving parts. The group spent countless hours and many late nights disassembling the engine, cutting out the windows, cleaning up the cuts and parts, and reassembling the engine. Using a 12-volt gear motor to drive the engine, since the engine can no longer function under its own power due to the windows, the cutaway is a full-scale model that demonstrates how the components of the tractor and engine work together to convert the potential energy stored in the fuel into power that ultimately drives the wheels of the tractor.

Following exhibition at the Sunbelt Ag Expo, the cutaway traveled to the John Deere plant in Augusta, GA for display starting in December 2007. The group plans to have the cutaway on display at several engine and tractor shows in the coming years.

A few individual glories emerged in the team's triumph. Quarterback Cullen Harper was named offensive M Valuable Player after setting 22 school records, including 27 touchdowns. Safety Michael Hamlin was named defensive MVP as an All-American and a pre-season All ACC pick. Running back C.J. Spiller was named spe teams MVP. Men's Soccer

The Men's Soccer team had its share of ups and downs in the 2007 fall season. The Tigers had a rough start to the season with a loss at home to USC. They quickly recovered against teams such as Gardner-Webb, UVC, USC Upstate and Georgia Southern. Later in the season the Tigers upset the sixth ranked team in the ACC, Bos College, with a win, 1-0. This sent them to the ACC Tournament in Cary, North Carolina against Wake Forest. T Tigers lost to Wake Forest with a two point difference. Clemson had played them earlier in the season and onl lost by one point. These men ended their season ranked second in the ACC. Also, Tommy Drake was named All-ACC Freshman. Overall, Head Coach Trevor Adair was "proud of the effort and the way we fought" in the 2007-2008 season.

Clemson Track and Field returns six student athletes who have previously earned All-American honors. One of these athletes is 2007 national 60-meter champion Travis Padgett. Also returning to the squad is two-time All-American Mitch Greeley in the pole vault.

"If you want to be the best, you have to compete against the best," says Bob Pollock, referring to the outdoor schedule. He feels that this season will be good not only for those returning, but all of the athletes. "Our outdoor schedule helps prepare us for the level of competition we will see not only at the ACC Championships, but also at Regionals," noted Pollock. Throughout the season, Tigers compete against other colleges that are as far as California and finish their season in Des Moines, Iowa for the NCAA Outdoor Championship.

Fike Classes

Fike Recreation has more to offer than just what meets the eye. For those getting ready for swimsuit season, Fike provides classes such as Washboard Abs, Tone and Trim, and Calorie Killer. Those looking for a fun workout, a Hip Hop or Turbo Kick class would be the key. The most popular classes at Fike are their Yoga classes.

Most classes are held in the lower aerobics studio. Students can find a schedule of all classes Fike offers at the front desk in the lobby or online. This is a great way for students to have fun and stay fit, while being obligated to spend a majority of time at desks, cafeterias, libraries, and lecture halls.

WHITEWATER CLUB

The Whitewater Club offers a unique experience for those who are not afraid of getting a little wet. This club encourages physical and mental development on and off the water. In addition to pushing their bodies to the limit, the club is a great way for members to meet new people that share their passion for adrenaline-driven fun.

The president of the club, Drew Getty, and the other members make several kayaking trips throughout the year to rivers such as the Green River, Ocoee River, and the Chattooga River. For students who are new at whitewater kayaking, the Clemson Whitewater Club will help them gain basic whitewater skills and exposure to the safety guidelines associated with whitewater sports.

CLUB BASEBALL

Club baseball players begin practicing twice a week in the fall in preparation for regio tournaments. In the spring, an intense schedule including games against teams such as Georgia Tech, NC State, UNC-Chapel Hill, and Wake Forest means more practice time at Stone Church Field.

This year's roster consisted of 32 players, a surprisingly large number compared to teams. "Our roster size this year is going to be rather large because of a sizeable talent p says Brennan Shutt, president of Clemson's club baseball team.

Team members put in two hours everyday plus overtime with weekend tournaments. In end, a successful season could send the Tigers to the regional tournament in Charlotte possibly a trip to the National World Series.

Women's Rugby has been around since its creation in 1995 by Jaime Swierczeck and Rachel Ferguson and has been growing ever since. Now there are about 25 players who practice for two hours on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings. The fall semester is used to train the new girls and the more competitive games are held in the spring.

These girls have had a good season so far this year. Currently the Women's Rugby team record is 4-1. In the spring semester, the team competes against UNC, NC State, and Appalachian State for the South Championship Title. Last season, Women's Rugby was undefeated at the South Championship and played in the first round of the National Sweet 16. The training and games are intense but fun-filled. These girls have a close-knit, family-like bond that enables them to work well on and off the field.

MEN'S CLUB

Headed by Coach Wright Henry and assisted by Coach Brandon Loftus, the Clemson Men's Rugby team has been ranked in the top 20 for the past four years in a row. In addition to those successes, they have beaten USC of the past 14 years.

Rugby is a fast-paced challenging sport that is played all over the world, and Clemson is no exception. With about 70 players on the team, Clemson Rugby holds the reputation of being an intense, competitive, and aggressive sport. With more than 400 alumni since 1967, the Clemson Men's Rugby team relies heavily on alumni involvement for support. Activities such as the annual alumni match, fund-raising, coaching, and communication between old and new players alike are what helps keep the team alive.

SWIM TEAM

The Clemson club swim team welcomes members of all experience levels to be a part o a team that promotes a fun way to keep in shape. Traveling to schools in the area, such as Furman University and Costal Carolina University, the team competes in several swim me throughout the academic year.

Even the competition swim meets are kept fun by interjecting events such as raft relay and kickboard races into the lineup. The team encourages anyone interested in swimming to come out to the natatorium at Fike and at least give club swim a try - whether he or she swam competitively in high school or you have never swam before and are just looking fo new exercise routine. Having fun and making new friends is what club swim is all about.

MEN'S CLUB VOLLEYBALL

Volleyball isn't just for the ladies, as the men also have a club team. They practice Sunday, Monda and Wednesday in the Club Sports Gym at Fike Recreation Center. It is a structured practice to help them stay in shape and keep their hands on the volleyball throughout the year.

The team roster consists of twelve guys who love volleyball. They play a year-round season with about four tournaments a year, which are mostly in the spring. This club team has men of all differen levels, ranging from beginners to advanced. The main thing these guys focus on is getting out and having lots of fun playing a sport they all enjoy. Jennifer Foiles

This senior from Hilton Head, SC is a Marketing major and a member of the Tiger Dancers.

What activities have you been involved with at Clemson?
I have been a part of Kappa Alpha Theta since Freshman year, and I was Vice President of Education (pledge mom). I also did Clemson Dancers and Tigerstrut. Lastly, I was a part of Tiger Dancers for the 2006 football season.

How did you come to be a Tiger Dancer and what was your favorite part about it?
I heard around campus that there was going to be dance group that was a part of the Tiger Band. My favorite part had to be doing the pre-show with the band and having the football players run down the hill.

How long have you been dancing and what influenced you the most to begin dancing?
I started dancing at the age of four. From four to eighteen, I did ballet solely. It wasn't until college that I started to explore other types of dancing. Honestly, I started dancing so young I can't really remember why I started, but I'm glad I did, obviously. If I had to guess why I started, I guess it was probably because I was driving my mom crazy being a bratty hooligan.

What do you like to do in your free time?
I love TV. I am an addict I suppose. The Office and It's Always Sunny In Philadelphia are my current favorites. I am also really interested in fashion. I also love to run. I started that in college after I unfortunately gained the "Freshman 15," but I've grown to love it and hope to compete in races soon.

What is your favorite part about being a Clemson student?
Not being a USC student.

What are your plans after graduation?
I plan to move up to New York City, probably live in Brooklyn (due to the insane rents in Manhattan) and hopefully work in Public Relations or as a company's Media Coordinator (deciding what media venues a particular company wants to market itself through).

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
Just being a part of Clemson football and basketball games by going to them.

Ross Squires

This Junior from Aynor, South Carolina is a Computer Science major who works at Campus Computing & Information Technology.

What got you so interested in computers?
Computer programming is what originally sparked my interested. I realized that by using simple programming languages, I could create software and applications that could do almost anything.

What brought you to Clemson?
Clemson offers one of the best computer science schools in the state, and I felt right at home in Clemson's close-knit, warm community.

What is it like working at CCIT? Do you like it there?
I work with students each day at CCIT. They come in with problems ranging from minuscule to mind-boggling. But whether it is just helping a student get through the day or solving tough problems, I enjoy my work at CCIT.

What do you hope to do after you graduate?
Hopefully after I graduate, I will be able to work with a company that is embracing the up-and-coming open source movement that is currently making waves the technology world.

What do you do for fun around campus?
I enjoy watching all of the performances on campus put on by students. I've spent several semesters performing with Clemson's music department, and the Brooks Center has some great shows.

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
My favorite Clemson University tradition is watching the football games from the hill in Death Valley. They're not kidding when they say that it is the most exhilarating 25 seconds of college football when the entire team rushes down the hill.

What is one thing you wish you knew before coming to college?

"I wish I knew more stuff I could cook."

-Brent Lodge

"I wish I knew some background on some of the teachers I had so I could have gotten better class schedules!"

-Courtney Cranford

"I wish I would have known that your Freshman 15 was only an average, not a limit."

-Charlie Gross

"The one thing I wish I knew would have to be how to study. I studied very little in high school and I had to completely retrain myself when I got here."

Eileen Hegel

Eileen Hegel is a professor in the Communications Department at Clemson. She teaches COMM 250, the dreaded Public Speaking course.

What did you do before coming to Clemson?
I worked for four years in the New York City area. I headed the Communication Department at Nyack College for one of those years. Then, I decided to work for Mercy College where I taught Communication courses in Manhattan, the Bronx and Dobbs Ferry, New York.

What brought you to Clemson?
I needed to recuperate from NYC! Actually, I love New York, but I did need a break from the greasy rats, dirty subways, and expensive living. I told myself if I got an offer a great school, then I would leave for awhile. Clemson called, I decided to fly south, and here I am!

Do you enjoy working with the Communications department here?
Yes! I love my students, and I like to help them grow in their personal and professional skills. Plus, I share my office with four other people, and we all enjoy each other. I am thankful for each of them.

What are you plans after Clemson?
I want to continue my inspirational and motivational writing for women on personal growth topics. Additionally, I want to focus more on my art and music so I can pursue my creative endeavors.

What do you like to do for fun around campus?
I like to take walks to soak in the beauty of the entire campus.

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
Well, I have to say, I now have an orange wardrobe, and I feel like a Creamsicle every Friday when everyone wears it, but I love to get into the team spirit!

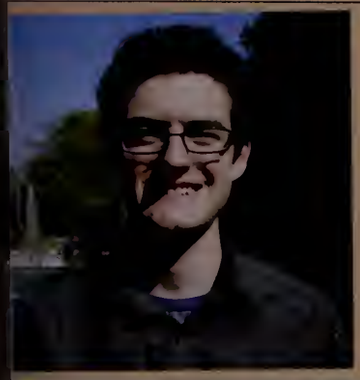
What are your thoughts on commuter parking?

"Commuter parking is very difficult to deal with."

-Justin Conner



"I think it's crazy that they sell more parking permits than they have parking spaces."

-Ross Squires

"I don't think there is enough parking for all the commuter students, so I think a good solution would be to limit the number of freshman allowed to have vehicles on campus."

-Heather Menghini

"It's alright. I think there should be more buses, however."

Tyler Conklin

This senior from Greensboro, GA, is majoring in Management Information systems.

What activities are you involved with at Clemson?
I am a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity and I worked for Dr. Jerome Reel, the University's historian.

What brought you to Clemson?
Clemson has a beautiful campus that is close to home.

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
I like cheering the football team on as they run down the hill and also watching Clemson baseball games from the outfield.

What do you hope to do after you graduate?
My goal is to attend law school and then start a career in the legal field.

What do you do for fun around campus?
I enjoy watching all of the performances on campus put on by students. I've spent several semesters performing with Clemson's music department, and the Brooks Center has some great shows.

What is one thing you know now that you wish you knew as a freshman?
I wish I knew how valuable freshman year is-- academically and socially. It sets the stage for the rest of your time here at Clemson.

Joe Ulaky

This junior from Charlotte, NC is an Architecture major who studied abroad in Barcelona in the Fall of 2007.

What brought you to Clemson?
I developed an interest in architecture at a young age, which helped me narrow down my college choices. I then compared the beautiful Clemson campus to the trashy campuses at UNC Charlotte and NC State to make my choice that much easier. The deal was sealed when my next door neighbor passed some football tickets along to my dad and I. I fell in love with the school while I took in the football traditions.

Why did you decide to go abroad?
Only so much understanding of architecture can be accomplished from reading books. Sometimes you just have to experience the building yourself. To come to any understanding of European culture and how it relates to architecture, you just have to be there—to live it. Clemson and I see eye to eye on that, so all I had to do was find the money.

What did you miss about Clemson while you were abroad?
Unfortunately, I was accepted into the Barcelona program for the fall semester, meaning I had to miss out on the entire football season. And no amount of new friends could replace the ones I left at Clemson.

What was the hardest thing to adjust to in Barcelona?
It took me my whole semester to be comfortable with the language barrier. I have not studied Spanish at Clemson, so I knew it would be difficult to try to pick it up while I was there. Luckily our classes were taught in English.

What did you like most about the whole experience?
The class went on two week-long trips to the other parts of Spain, one in September and one in October. These trips helped the class grow closer together while allowing us to explore more European cities. There is always excitement in arriving in a new city, then you get lost for a few hours, and you look back on your day and you say, "I wouldn't have had it any other way."

What did you not like about the whole experience?
There were a few weeks scattered throughout the semester when I was unable to get out of the studio; there was just that much work to get done. It really compressed the semester to the point where I left some unfinished business (ie: buildings I didn't tour, museums I didn't enter, scenery I didn't get to see). I guess I just have to go back!

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
My absolute favorite tradition is running down the hill. Death Valley explodes for 25 seconds, and all you think about is how proud you are to be a Tiger.

Kristin Calhoun

This junior from Boiling Springs, SC is a trumpet player in the Clemson Tiger Band.

When did you begin playing the trumpet?
I've been playing the trumpet since the 6th grade. So that makes it around 9-10 years or so.

How did you become interested in the trumpet?
A family friend had a trumpet that they weren't using and offered it to me. Knowing next to nothing about instruments and band in general, I accepted graciously and am very glad of that decision.

What is your favorite aspect about being a part of the Clemson Tiger Band?
My favorite thing about being in the band is the camaraderie that we all share. We're like family in a sense. We're there for one another through the good times and the bad. There are always dysfunctional moments, but what family is perfect? When it comes down to it, we wouldn't be part of the band if we didn't love it. Who else would spend hours upon hours practicing through a record-breaking heat wave and then show up on game day ready for anything in a wool/polyester blend uniform?

Where is your favorite place to play?
I love playing in Death Valley. Pre-game is full of so much energy and excitement, especially this year with our new entrance. The crowd can get so loud that I cannot hear anyone, including myself, actually playing. Halftime is such a rewarding experience because we can finally display what we have been working tirelessly on.

What are your plans after graduation from Clemson?
I know that graduation is still a long ways off, but in the same respect it is right around the corner. Even so, I don't really know what the world has in store for me within the next year and a half. I do know that everything happens for a reason and life will work itself out. I do hope that after spending all these years practicing for one thing or another, giving a concert for something and playing Tiger Rag to the point of hearing it in my sleep, that I will continue playing my trumpet after my time here at Clemson is over.

What is your favorite Clemson Tradition?
My favorite Clemson tradition is being part of the largest organization on campus. The "Band that Shakes the Southland" consisted of around 230 strong this year and embodied the Clemson spirit. Being able to play Tiger Rag and hear the entire stadium partake in the Clemson spell out is enough to send chills down our back.

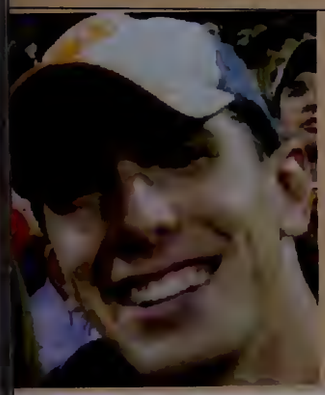
Where is your favorite place to hang out on campus?

"I like to walk around the center of campus at night and sit on benches in that area because it's very peaceful."

-Omar Haque



"Any field where there is room to throw a football or kick a soccer ball. That's one of the cool things about Clemson, the girls are participating in sports as much as the guys. "

-Brian Johnson

"My favorite place to hang out on campus was the intramural fields. That was the best place to meet friends to play soccer and have some fun. I loved being able to get outside and take a break from school work."

-Allison Townson

"My favorite place to hang out on campus is the Theta hall, but when it's pretty weather I love to layout and do homework in the ampitheatere."

-Hillary Herbert

Which is your favorite. Ben&Jerry's, Spill the Beans, or the 55 Exchange?

"My favorite place to get ice cream is Spill the Beans! It wasn't until this fall that I was introduced to frozen yogurt with cheesecake and graham crackers mixed in!"

-Ashley York

"I like Spill the Beans because of the catchy name, good ice cream, and it's generally easy to find parking."

-Drew Bedingfield

"Easily Spill the Beans. They have great ice cream, and I like how you can mix it up the way you want. Plus, sometimes they give you free ice cream at random if you're lucky."

-Paul Barnello

"Spill the Beans because you get more bang for your buck!"

Besides football, what is the best sport to watch at Clemson?

"Besides football, rugby is by far the best sport to watch on campus. It's got fast-paced play and plenty of big hits. Plus, you don't need a ticket to go to the games, and you're always guaranteed a place on the sideline to watch."

-Michael Bernard

"I would have to say that besidès football, my favorite Clemson sport to watch is basketball. Basketball games are a lot of fun to watch because it is such a fast paced game. It's more personable, and no mater where you sit you feel like you are somehow a part of the game."

-Scott Fogleman

'Besides football, my favorite sport to watch would be basketball. Even though there are sometimes a lot of empty seats it is still always a really exciting atmosphere in Littlejohn, with the students, players, cheerleaders, rally cats, and fans."

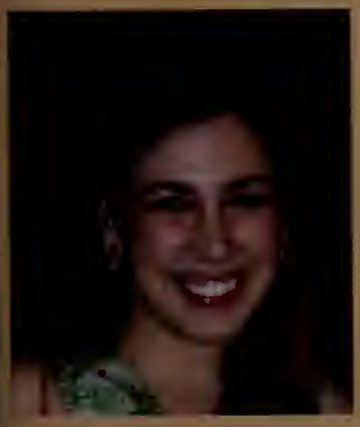
What is your favorite event of the year?

"My favorite Clemson events would be all the concerts at Littlejohn. There are a lot of good concerts every year and it is always fun to see them!"

-Kate Stewart



"Football season at Clemson University is by far the most exciting thing a Clemson Student can experience throughout the year."

-Laura Sneed

"My favorite event of the year is Tigerama."

Drew Anne Westmoreland

Drew Anne Westmoreland is a junior at Clemson. She came here as a Graphic Communications major, but has since changed to become a Health Science major.

Why did you change your major?
I loved graphics but never really knew what I wanted to do with it. After doing an internship in Myrtle Beach, I realized that I didn't want to be working in front of a computer. I couldn't figure out anything else that I wanted or could do with graphics. After a personal experience, I decided that I wanted to be able to help people for a living. I finally figured out what I wanted to do for a career, and that was help people through medicine. So I decided to change my major and go to medical school.

Do you think you made the right decision?
Yes, as long as medical school works out! I think that I made the right decision. I'm pursuing a career that I am excited and passionate about, and also being able to fulfill a goal of helping people. I enjoyed graphics and I got some valuable information but I think that a career in medicine is better suited to what I want to do with my life.

What do you think you will do after you graduate?
Hopefully I will go to an osteopathic medical school. I'll be in school for four years, then the post-school requirements. Eventually I hope to end up in the Charlotte area working for the hospital system.

What do you do around campus for fun?
Usually I just hang out with my friends. When we're not working on school stuff, we go out to eat or watch movies. Sometimes we like to go for drives when we feel like we need to just get away. I also like going to Kappa Alpha Theta functions and sisterhood events.

What is your favorite Clemson tradition?
Watching the Tigers run down the hill. It gives me chills every time that I see it. I also like watching the tiger on top of the scoreboard when its eyes light up and tail wags every time we get a touch down. That tiger is on of my first memories of Clemson football from when I was a little girl.

How often do you check Facebook and email?

"I check my email several times a day and Facebook maybe once a day or once every few days. I check email more because it's a bigger means of communication that's more important to school. I love Facebook, but when I get on it, I stay on for hours. It's more of a distraction than anything."

- Bryson Schaeffer

"I check my email and Facebook as often as I can because I like to think that I can communicate with the outside world. I like to know what is going on. Email makes me paranoid."

- Elyse Dorsey

"I am obsessed with checking my email, but I think it's because it's a necessity at Clemson. Classes are demanding, and you have to constantly stay in contact with professors and students in your group to make sure you are on track."

-Kate Wright

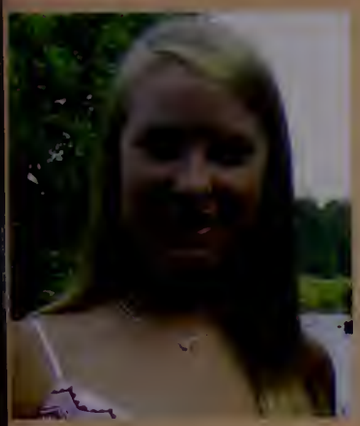
What is the biggest transition between high school and Clemson?

"TIme management is the biggest thing I've had to adjust to because there's always so much to do all around me that I need to learn to say no."

-Kendra Neely



"Coming from a fairly small school, I felt the biggest transition in starting Clemson was losing the established familiarity of my high school. In coming to Clemson I didn't know very many people, which forced me to become involved in classes and activities that were new to me."

-Judith Crews

"The biggest transition I had to face from high school to college was the fact that if I ran into trouble I couldn't just as easily run to my parents to fix it—they were nine hours away. I learned how to rely on myself to get through things on my own and be much more self-sufficient."

TAPS

TAPS, the official yearbook of Clemson University, has been a Clemson tradition since 1908. It is TAPS' goal to capture all aspects of Clemson life throughout the year so that students, faculty, and staff have a way to share their Clemson experiences with their family and friends.

TAPS welcomes all students interested in every aspect of yearbook production, including photography, writing, and business management, to join staff and be a part of recording Clemson's history.

CLEMSON

One Hundred Years of TAPS

For the past century, TAPS, the yearbook of Clemson University, has continuously strived to capture the Clemson experience at a fixed moment in time. Succeeding to greater and lesser degrees, it has created a written and photographic record of the institution, useful to both alumni and historians of the school. Its staff has always prided itself on the quality of its book, and for good reason. Among its other awards, TAPS has frequently received accolades from the Associated Collegiate Press.

As this book has survived for the majority of Clemson's existence, it has witnessed and recorded many notable moments for the school. The staff declared in 1923 that graduating senior J. Strom Thurmond "was to write his name in indelible print on the records of this institution." In 1956, they celebrated the growing number of females at Clemson and made a tongue-in-cheek bereavement of the death of the military school: "Who would get you up in th mornings… how would you know it was time fo meals?" In 1970, at the end of the Frank Howard era they wrote, "After thirty years and 165 victories, i ended on a rainy, dreary afternoon." They were silen on other important moments. Harvey Gantt's portrai amid the other Juniors in 1964 was the only indicatio of Clemson's historic integration.

They have commented on student life acros the years in ways that might be familiar to moder students. They described the 1973 football seaso thusly: "Disappointed followers. Disappointed player Disappointed coaches. Yet hopeful all." They offere their opinion of Clemson medical facilities in 191 by writing, "A Fresh Supply of Pills and Capsules always on hand at the Clemson College Hospital. Pill all colors and flavors. Guaranteed to comply with th Pure Food Laws as they are made from pure bread..

A. M Redfern, General Manager."

The book, known throughout much of its history as Taps, was not the first true Clemson yearbook, or even the third. Clemson yearbooks began in 1899, when the Clemson College Chronicle made their final issue of the year a yearbook. This was repeated the following year, but in 1901, the first yearbook proper, the Clemsonian, appeared, only to vanish immediately and cause the Chronicle to resume yearbook duty. 1903 saw the Oconeean, but after several volumes, it failed as well. In 1906, Clemson yearbooks broke free of the pages of a literary magazine for good with the creation of the Clemson College Annual, which was published by the Corps of Cadets.

When the first edition of Taps was finally created in 1908, it was more than yet another in an interminable series of name changes, as publication was now exclusively the domain of the Senior Class. It was otherwise much like its predecessors, extensively publishing poetry and prose, and still included satire of the school. In a Mess Hall menu supposedly written by Mess Hall manager "Shorty" Schilletter, the staff wrote, "All complaints regarding food, service, etc., will be promptly consigned to the wastebasket." Schilletter was also thanked multiple times for assisting in the finances of the yearbook, which may have been connected to the eventual discovery that he was embezzling from the school.

Among the staff, crammed in the basement of the long-since demolished 7th Barracks, complaining about yearbook work began early. This first volume contained an "advice to freshmen" section, which advised, "Don't allow yourself to be put on the Annual Staff when you get to Senior."

The absolute earliest volumes were published with cloth covers, of which very few survive today, giving way quickly to leather, which were also short-lived. The earliest staffs were divided into groups, typically Executive Staff, Literary Staff, and Art Staff. Given the decline of illustrations, poetry, or satire, the last two would become outmoded. Thanks to a growing student body, 1927 was the last year that Seniors would receive individualized write-ups. From there it would shrink to a listing of activities, and finally to just a mention of major and maybe hometown in tiny print.

The 1940 edition was a watershed moment, as it introduced the Junior Staff, comprised unsurprisingly of Juniors. Seniors still made up the main staff with all the important editorial posts, but the juniors did all the busywork, hoping to be chosen by their leaders for Senior Staff positions. According to a typical account of the staff's work from 1943, which naturally managed to sneak in a little complaining, "The 'Taps' staff, unlike the annual staffs of most schools, do their own layout work, art, photography, and copy writing. These chores, of course, detract a great deal from curricular activities, but, insofar as 'Taps' has been ranked All-American for several years, it is felt the product is worth the effort." The 1943 book also came very close to not being made, "with a war going on and everbody's yelling about film and copper shortages." It turned out to be the last book during the war.

The book was disbanded for several years, and might have remained that way for even longer had not a group of interested students decided to revive the yearbook for 1947, and ultimately created the thickest book until that time by far. They ran a three-spread memorial listing the name of Clemson students and alumni who died in the war, and ran a portraits section for all graduates between 1944 and 1946, and a lengthy section on wartime activities.

By the forties and fifties, the books consistently provided at least a brief description of the production of the book, even if it was merely plagiarized from the previous volume. (One of the current editors will tell you that it is impossible to plagiarize from yourself.)

Increasingly, many editions bemoaned the tedious, sleep-depriving, GPA-destroying horrors of making a yearbook. In 1957, they wrote, "Like all of its predecessors the Taps was produced under the same physical and mental torments which were always available to supply the characteristic background to our office…" The 1974 staff would write, "We stayed up until the wee hours of the morning with impending deadlines, missed shots, lost prints, unwritten copy, irate students, unsympathetic club presidents, and insufficient funds."

Following the admission of women to Clemson in 1955, many female students had difficulty breaking into student organizations, and student media groups were notable holdouts. It was not until 1965 did females appear on the staff page as anything but the Taps Sweetheart. The same females broke onto Senior Staff the next year, and in 1967, Nancy Miller became the first female editor of the yearbook.

When the Edgar Allen Brown Student Union was built in the late fifties, containing a Student Media center, Taps was placed in a far better office in Suite 902. Tangentially, the 1967 book was the first to ıake the unexplained use of all-caps when referring › TAPS. With few exceptions, this way of writing has stuck. The military school connotation of the ame has devolved further since then: 1993 was the ıst time so much as a bugle appeared on the cover.

The book's tone became more creative and ven turned a little caustic during the Vietnam era. he 1970 staff page announced, among other things, TAPS before SEX." The 1971 staff flippantly called ıeir book "a 616 page attempt by 15 bigoted people to ‹press in the graphic medium 228 days in the lives of .038 persons," or else "a useless, outdated tradition f a bourgeois society." They were joking, yes, but by ɔw much was unclear. In 1972, the title page had a deways photograph of a dead fish on it.

A major change came in 1976, when the first ɔok making no Junior/Senior Staff differentiation as published. It is not clear if the classifications ɛcame nonexistent for a time, as they would reappear some editions. However, the rigid hierarchy and ·derly succession, which had for a long time been ɛy to the book's excellence and uniqueness, were ɔne. The distinction is in use today, but is far less rmal and tends to not be directly expressed in the ɔok.

Changes in publication technology meant at the very intense camaraderie that came from phabetizing cards until dawn together began to adually wane. The burning tedium of yearbook oduction did not die easily, however. In 1977, the litor-in-chief said his staff spent 30 or 40 hour weeks aking the yearbook. By the 80s, though, the personal ımputer revolution began to ease the pain. When the ɛndrix Student Center was built in 1999, and the book was relocated to its finest offices yet in the new Student Media suite, there was no darkroom built.

The death of the old TAPS paved the way not only for people to remain on staff four years rather than two, but also for people to hold positions multiple years, such as Editor-in-Chief Richard Baldwin. Baldwin introduced TAPS editorials that would criticize the university or the president, or perhaps call for the introduction of instructor evaluations. It was an innovation that died upon his graduation. Editor write-ups before and since have stuck to praising that year's staff. Complaining about yearbook work has even gone out of vogue in the yearbook itself, but of course that venerable tradition continues proudly outside of print.

Beginning in 2005, the book has been printed exclusively in color. The organization has also undergone another shift recently with the introduction of co-managing editors. Implemented successfully in 2001, twin chiefs of the book have appeared in many subsequent years, including this one. This system has allowed each editor to cover for any shortcomings on the other's part. Also, for an institution which remained all-male for so long, this book has had only a female editor, or female editors, for thirteen years.

Incidentally, because of the convoluted beginnings of Clemson yearbooks, 2002 saw the 100th yearbook (despite the claims of the 1998 editor), while thanks to the years on hiatus, 2010 will see the 100th edition of TAPS, so there is some ambiguity to what we are really celebrating here. The only safe statement is that 2008 represents a full century of this particular series of yearbooks.

Story by Russell Cox

Past TAPS Staff

For our centennial edition, we contacted many alumni of our staff and asked them about their memories of working for this yearbook.

Nancy James
Co-Organizations Editor, 1966
Editor-in-Chief, 1967

"Being a part of the Clemson experience was destined when my dad Henry Samuel Miller graduated in 1929 with a degree in Civil Engineering. He had a quiet way of encouraging me to be one of 69 coeds who would occupy the first Women's Dorm as well as take the responsibility of being the first female Editor-in-Chief of TAPS.

"The most challenging aspect of creating the yearbook was to produce another in a series which had been awarded the prestigious All American award by the Associated Collegiate Press located at the University of Minnesota School of Journalism. We succeeded by working as a family. Our use of fade out and black background for color pictures in section divisions began a contemporary look for the TAPS tradition.

"Clemson became a university during my time there. The experience with the yearbook became the stepping stone to an investment position with Wachovia and opened later opportunities in the business world. I am still in frequent contact with Linda Acree Hobbs of Winston-Salem and my investment advisor Mac Harley of Charleston."

ohn Bethea
'hotographer, 1971-74

In his time at Clemson, John Bethea vas a Horticulture major with a minor n Visual Studies. He got the chance to harpen the photography skills useful or such a minor by shooting sporting vents, mostly football for TAPS.

Today, he uses his photography kills to complete progress updates and brochures for his landscape contracting ob. Mr. Bethea got his start on the TAPS staff after showing people on staff a icture he took of eleven Lancaster football players going after the ball in a ame when he was working part time in high school as a photographer.

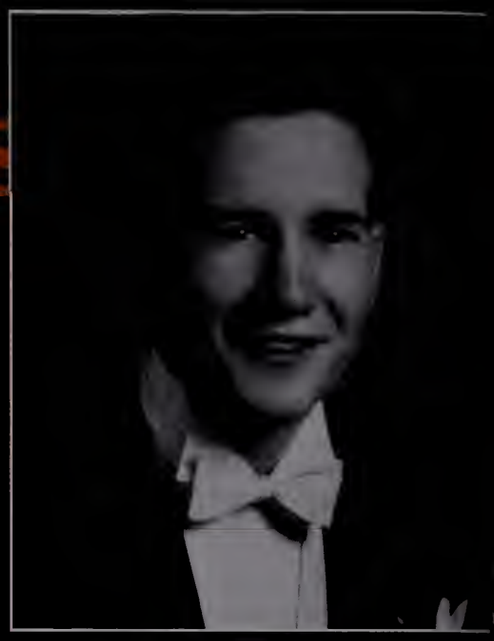
As a photographer, Mr. Bethea remembers spending every home football ame on the sidelines. Football photographers must posess a lot of nerve, and e was occasionally tackled by the players.

Part of being a photographer before the digital age included processing nd developing the film. Most of the work was done in black and white, and ny photos they wanted in color had to be shipped to Kodak and processed by tem. TAPS bought mostly 135mm film in bulk and rolled it themselves to save toney.

While the process Mr. Bethea went through to develop pictures and place tem yearbook is foreign to today's staff members, the experience of spending ights in the office working on deadlines remains constant.

Mr. Bethea was married, worked part time, and worked on TAPS while at lemson, so during crunch time, he would have to spend in the office three or ur hours when he should have been studying. He still managed to graduate ith Honors.

Recently Mr. Bethea attended several home games, and sat in the upper eck with his son. Nostalgically, he told his son, "it's a different view from o here than on the field." His days of using the press pass and standing on e sidelines snapping pictures is something he will never forget just as the notos he contributed to TAPS will be viewed by people for years to come and epresent a great time in Clemson for many alumni.



Richard Caughman
Junior Staff, 1940
Associate Editor, 1941

In 1940, Richard Caughman was in charge of the Junior Staff of the TAPS yearbook, and in 1941 he became the Associate Editor. He spent many memorable days and nights in the TAPS office working with his fellow staff members.

He said that "the experience working with staff members, printers, engravers, and others to create a memorable book" is something he has always appreciated. The lessons he learned working on staff have been put to use in his professional and personal life. He added that "the entire experience of creating a history of a year in the life of the cadet corps" will stand out in his memory forever. He relished the opportunity to participate in an extra-curricular activity on campus and the entire job of creating the book and being a part of staff was then, as always, a challenge.

Bryn H. Smith
Junior Staff, 1998-99
Academics Editor, 2000
Editor-in-Chief, 2002

Not too long ago, Bryn Smith was camping out in the TAPS yearbook office in Hendrix. Bryn would go from her last class on Thursday nights right to the yearbook office and stay up all night until she had to move her car before she got a ticket for parking in employee parking. Because of her all-night efforts, she and the photo editor were the first people to read The Tiger when it was delivered on Friday morning.

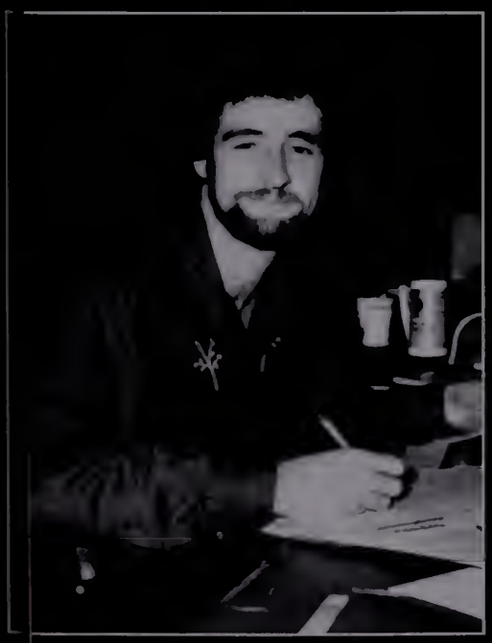
Being a Graphic Communications major, her TAPS work paralleled her studies and assisted in her positions working at a printing company and now at a retouching/prepress company. Her most memorable story as editor came as the terrorists attacked in 2001, because she grew up in New York and lives there now. One of the most challenging aspects of TAPS for Bryn was having to find enough volunteers involved to get the work done, something all staff members can relate to. Being on staff took up a lot of Bryn's time, but it also gave her the opportunity to learn about all the different activities that students could participate in and how other students spent their time.

Mark Sublette
Staff Writer, 1979
Organizations Editor, 1980

After writing for The Tiger for several years, Mark Sublette wanted a change, so he joined TAPS. He greatly enjoyed working alongside staff members, some of whom he still stays in contact with. He felt honored to help write the history of Clemson. Doing so taught him much about researching original sources to develop background for stories that might otherwise seem lifeless or boring. He uses these skills today as the primary historian for the Clemson Wiki web site.

Mark recounted that his most memorable experience on TAPS was the trip to visit the Hunter Publishing plant in Winston-Salem, NC. He said, "I was fascinated by seeing how publications were put together in the pre-digital age. In addition to seeing TAPS layouts, the company was also producing textbooks, and I was intrigued by seeing photo-ready source material on the oversized cameras that would produce the printing plate images."

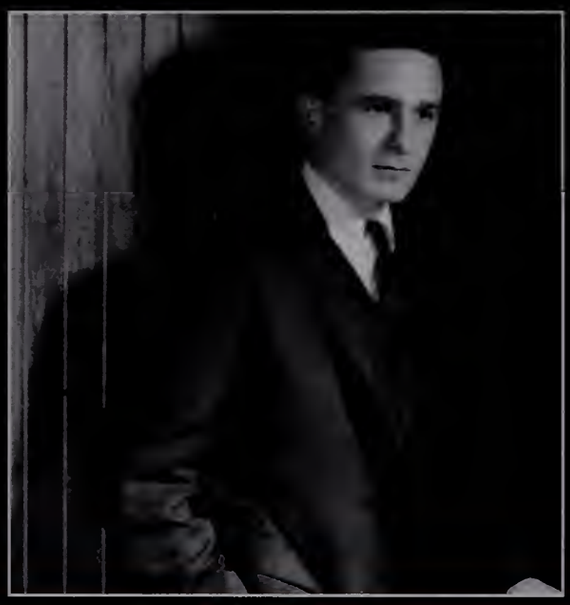
Mark vividly remembers numerous stories and photos, often on a tight deadline. When an assigned writer turned in unusable copy for a story on autumn in the 1979 edition, he was charged with replacing it at the last minute. When photos of the Bengal Ball were required for the same edition, he used some of his own photos that were not shot on assignment but happened to be the best pictures available. Some of his dorm friends from Johnstone Hall ended up featured prominently in the book, as friends of staff members always seem to.



When the Southern Railway handed off the Southern Crescent passenger route to Amtrak on February 1st, 1979, he compiled a story on it. The story included a photo of a young Southern Railway conductor, Aubrey H. Spruell, standing on a train platform and talking on a very clunky hand radio set at Brookwood Station on Peachtree Street in Atlanta. Twenty years later, he would work with an aged Spruell, as an Amtrak sleeping car attendant on the Crescent, out of Atlanta.

George Begg
Office Manager, 1962

Although George Begg joined TAPS just to get involved at Clemson, he got a lot more out of it than he bargained for. He remembers the tight deadlines as the most challenging aspect of the work and "running junior staff" as one of the most rewarding tasks.



Even with a course load of 22 hours, he managed to do yearbook work and get his best grades. His experiences developed management skills that helped him in ROTC and in the Army.

When asked what was most memorable about his TAPS days, George replied, "Miss Albert, Dean Cox's assistant."

Howard Zerbst
Sports Editor, 1941

While students around Clemson's campus were anticipating the ground breaking of the new football stadium that is now Death Valley, the TAPS staff were focused on producing another great book.

Howard Zerbst was part of that staff and served on staff for two years, including a year as Sports Editor.

The time he spent on TAPS helped broaden his outlook on life. While he joined staff because he was asked to, he used the opportunity to meet people and make many friends. He considers the experience definitely to have been worth it. Looking back, he feels that one of the more challenging aspects of the experience was the long hours the staff put in preparing the book.

He was a Horticulture major while at Clemson and is currently retired and living in Roanoke, VA.

usan Richerson
tudent Life Editor, 1989-90
Managing Editor, 1991

"Ideas people, we need ideas!" It was a phrase that Susan Richerson often said and heard during Monday ight TAPS staff meetings. Her memories of the nights and weekends pent in the office in the old Union are still vivid. She said, "I am such a erfectionist; I cannot read even a simple email with out checking it for rammar and spelling errors. I pay attention to all the small details in verything I do. I also learned great management skills during my time on taff, and how to multitask and manage a variety of people is a valuable sset I use everyday in my current career."

Mrs. Richerson got her start on staff through an ad she and her oommate found in The Tiger. "We walked in as freshmen, no experience t all working on yearbooks and I was elected Student Life editor and she ecame a photographer. They were really short-staffed, and we had to beg eople to work on the book and help write stories." In her time, computers ere already being used on page submissions, but photographs were still anually developed, printed and cropped. It was a challenge trying to gure out how the photos would fit together on the pages, but the layouts lways came together anyway.

She still remembers the story she wrote about guys washing clothes i college. "It was the funniest thing to interview them and see how many ad NO clue what to do in a laundromat. But the ones that shocked me ere the ones that admitted that mom gave them lessons before they left r school. That was always one of my favorites."

"I loved being part of creating history at Clemson," she said of her TAPS work. "The yearbook gave me opportunities to work with other students whom I may have never gotten to know because they were in majors that were far removed from mine. I felt like I was part of the campus instead of just being there. I was able to walk away and look back and realize that work I had done while at Clemson would be there forever in print! TAPS was more than just a yearbook job, we all became family. Many of us joined the staff together and had four wonderful years creating memories."

WIX

Wix – Manufacturer of Quality Automotive Filters

We have no jobs at Affinia. We have careers.

In a career we are engaged, possessed of a mission, part of a larger picture. We understand our goals, work diligently to achieve them and are rewarded appropriately.

The Affinia environment is structured to engage our people. It is an atmosphere of freedom, fairness and trust where we are encouraged to use our creativity for the greater good. Whatever our piece of the puzzle is, we are expected to question, make suggestions and improve how it works and how it contributes. This environment is a great motivator.

Rogers & Brown℠
Heroes. Everyday.℠

Ships, trains, planes, nor trucks move product. People do. People who show up to work each day with sleeves rolled up. Proud employees dedicated to the success of their clients. Loyal folks who understand that time is money, assembly lines cannot stop, cars need tires.

The sleep we sacrifice puts our clients at ease. The solutions we invent help streamline business and move cargo faster. Global networks we build make storms, port congestion and tight security restrictions small hurdles. We are Rogers & Brown. Our tireless efforts bring certainty to an industry where much is left to chance.

Our clients see us more than just a dedicated partner, They see us as heroes. Everyday.

Offering exciting career opportunities. For more information, please contact us at 843-577-3036 or send your resume to 843-958-2370

CPM
Federal Credit Union
With us, it's personal!

What is a credit union?

At its core, a credit union is a fundamentally different sort of financial institution. It is a not for profit, democratically controlled, financial cooperative. Each characteristic brings unique advantages to the people who do financial business with a credit union.

A cooperative business follows a model that is built on serving the needs of its users. Members centered product development and community involvement is central to the philosophy behind every credit union.

A credit union is a financial institution that treats its members like they own the place, because they do!

Letter from the Editors

Dear Clemson,

This year was particularly special, as it was the 100th year of TAPS. We enjoyed celebrating our centennial birthday, working with our amazing staff, and getting to know a little bit more about this place that, for us, certainly has offered perhaps the best four years of our lives.

We feel so privileged to have had the opportunity to record another year of Clemson's rich heritage and tradition. This book would not be possible if not for the hard work and devotion of many people. Thank you for all you do, day in and day out, on behalf of TAPS.

We are also extremely grateful for your support of TAPS, for without readers like you, there would be no purpose to what we do.

Go Tigers,

Kristen Purvis and Beth Rosner

Colophon

Volume 98 of TAPS, Clemson University's official yearbook, contains 456 pages. 3,000 copies were printed, and the price of each book was $75.

Cover and Endsheets

The cover and endsheets were designed by Kristen Purvis and Beth Rosner with the assistance of Hank Whitaker, Jostens' artist. Endsheet photography was taken by Jonathan Jordan.

Type

The primary fonts used throughout the book were AYT Litho Antique, AYT Chris, AYT Kent and AYT Clearface. Body copy was typically 12 or 14 point type, captions were typically 9 point type and photography credits were 8 point type.

Printing

Jostens of Winston-Salem, NC printed the book. Claude Saleeby of Spartanburg, SC was the company representative and Joanne Snyder was the senior customer service representative within the plant.

Photography

All photographs credited to TAPS staff members were taken with a Canon Digital Rebel EOS. Carl Wolf Studios was contracted to photograph the student body for the portraits section.

Advertising

Advertisements were sold and designed by Education Service, Inc.

No portion of this book may be reproduced, published or used in promotion without the permission of the TAPS editor or Media Advisor. The content of this book does not necessarily represent the views of Clemson University.
